Viet Cong Shell Nails U.S. Jet

DONG XOAI (Reuters)—Communist Viet Cong guerrillas launched a new attack and shot down a U.S. Air Force F-100 Super Sabre jet today near this bloody battleground where perhaps 1,300 Vietnamese on both sides have been killed this week.

8TH CHANGE IN VIET NAM GOVERNMENT

SAIGON (AP)—Mounting public pressure and an internal feud were climaxed today by the resignation of South Viet Nam's four-month-old civilian government, which returned power to the generals.

It was the eighth change of government in the war-torn country since strongman President Ngo Dinh Diem was overthrown and assassinated less than 20 months ago.

Premier Phan Huy Quat and Chief of State Phan Khanh Suu, who had clashed over a cabinet shakeup, agreed to stay on in caretaker roles along with other members of the government.

But the national charter and the legislative council were eliminated and a highly-placed source said that "at this point we are starting absolutely from scratch."

An estimated 500 Viet Cong guerrillas launched a heavy attack against about 100 men of the South Vietnamese 7th Airborne Battalion less than two miles from the devastated remains of Dong Xoai, a U.S. military spokesman said.

He said the whole battalion was withdrawing to Dong Xoai to link up with a ranger battalion stationed here.

A spokesman in Saigon said the U.S. Air Force jet was shot down north of Dong Xoai and that although the pilot bailed out successfully, the crew of a rescue helicopter found his body riddled with bullets.

Armed helicopters rushed to this area only 60 miles from Saigon. Air strikes on the guerrillas were ordered.

Guerrillas overran a South Viet Nam post and seized a radio station near Song Be, 70 miles northeast of Saigon, Friday night. They promptly began broadcasting from it.

Song Be was the target of a regiment-size attack by the Viet Cong May 11, which was beaten back by massive U.S. and government air strikes.

NARCOTICS SHORTAGE SPARKS WILD RIOT

VANCOUVER (CP)—A sudden shortage of underworld narcotics apparently sparked a wild, two-hour uproar today along a two-block stretch of skid road here.

More than 70 persons were arrested and taken to jail cells by a shuttle service of police wagons. No serious injuries were reported.

Crowds estimated at 200-300

gathered outside East Hastings Street cafes and hurled curses and taunts at police officers. Police dogs were brought in to control the mob.

One man was bitten by a police dog but was not seriously harmed.

Police blamed the melee on a sudden, unexplained shortage of drugs on skid road.

Those arrested were being held on charges of fighting, being drunk and obstructing police officers.

WIRE BRIEFS

Hangar Destroyed

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI)—Damage was estimated at $500,000 in a fire that destroyed an aircraft hangar near the Moncton airport today. One fireman was injured in the blaze which was believed to have started in the kitchen of the Moncton Flying Club which leased part of the building.

Tories Gain Support

LONDON (AP)—Heavy betting on the Conservative party to win the next British national election was reported today by Ladbrokes, a handbook specializing in this form of wager.

Plotter Arrested

Three Die In Crash

70 MILE HOUSE, B.C. (CP)—Three men died Friday night in the head-on crash of a station wagon and a pickup truck near this Cariboo community. There were no survivors in either vehicle.

Shastri Seeks Trade

Epidemic Kills 550

CAUHAATI, India (AP)—More than 550 persons have died in an eight-week epidemic of gastroenteritis in the east India state of Assam, official figures showed today.

OTTAWA IRONY

N-Arms Parade Past Shastri

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada today paraded four nuclear weapons—without their American nuclear warheads—outside the hotel window of visiting Prime Minister Shastri of India.

Prime Minister Pearson took the salute as the parade passed the main entrance to the Parliament Buildings which lie next door to the Chateau Laurier where Mr. Shastri is staying.

As the nuclear carriers—Bomarc anti-aircraft missile, Honest John artillery rocket, CF-104 bomber and CF-101 jet interceptor—rolled by or flew overhead, Mr. Shastri was conferring in his hotel suite on economic matters with three Canadian cabinet ministers. They were Finance Minister Gordon, Trade Minister Sharp and Defence Production Minister Drury.

Mr. Shastri Friday night, to spontaneous applause, pledged India anew to abstention from the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

He and Mr. Pearson earlier discussed means of preventing the spread of nuclear arms.

WHAT MANNER OF MAN?

"What manner of man would proclaim peace and spend more than Canada on a war machine?"

The spokesman for the Indian high commission said there was no intention of attacking Pakistan in the ad. The sole purpose was to present an "explanatory note of the facts."

Knife Slash Kills Woman in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP)—A young woman died from a cut throat and her sister received several knife wounds following a house party early today in the north end of the city.

Police swore out a warrant for Robert Desjarlais, 23, of Calgary on a charge of capital murder. Road blocks were set up at all bridges leading from the city.

Rosalie Johnson, 25, died in a police car on the way to hospital. Her sister, Linda Johnson, 20, underwent surgery for several wounds.

4 Hunted In Ont., Quebec

LARDER LAKE, Ont. (CP)—Four masked men Friday stole five gold bars worth $164,000 from a small railway station near this Northern Ontario town in one of Canada's biggest gold thefts.

The men are believed to have made their getaway in a float-equipped aircraft from Larder Lake, about three miles from the Ontario Northland Railway station.

Provincial police at Kirkland Lake, 17 miles west of here, said early today that six roadblocks were still up in the area although it was believed the men had used a plane to get away.

The search for the men spread over Northern Ontario and into Quebec.

The robbery ranks among Canada's largest in recent years. Thieves took $214,000 worth of gold bars from Toronto International Airport in 1952 but the still unsolved theft did not involve armed bandits.

ALL WERE ARMED

The four men in Friday's daring theft all wore masks and carried pistols, shotguns and rifles. They made off with five gold bars weighing a total of about 300 pounds, packed in two safes.

S. C. Yule, manager of Kerr-Addison Mines Ltd. at Virginitown, 11 miles east of this community of 1,200, said the men took bars awaiting shipment to the mint in Ottawa.

He said the gold is shipped to Larder Lake every Friday under guard. When the guard leaves, Mr. Tomkin is left alone with the gold for about four hours until it is placed on a train.

Police said the masked bandits burst in on Mr. Tomkin about 5:03 p.m.

Mr. Tomkin, 35, a father of two, was taken by surprise and tied to a handcar. However, he managed to spot the licence number of the car used by the bandits.

A native of Larder Lake, a man called Luigi, happened by the station just seven minutes after the robbery and freed the agent, who then notified police.

SEE IT, SHOOT IT, SEND IT TO TIMES PHOTO CONTEST

Now is the time for all the good—and not so good—photographers to load their cameras, polish up their lenses and oil their trigger finger for the 1965 Victoria Daily Times Photo Contest.

For six weeks starting June 26, amateur photographers will have a chance to make their hobby pay off by competing in the National Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

This is the third year the Times has sponsored the contest and a record number of entries are expected.

Weekly winners in each category of the contest will receive $10 and will have their winning snaps published in the Times. In addition they'll compete at the end of the contest for grand local winners.

These selected entries will receive $15 each and will then be entered in the national contest to compete for $50,000 in prizes.

The two first prizes will take their winners on a 30-day around-the-world trip for two plus $1,000 in spending money for each winner.

Other prizes include: two 21-day European tours for two plus $300 cash; two 14-day trips to Mexico for two plus $250; two seven-day trips to Hawaii for two plus $100 cash and two seven-day trips to the West Indies for two plus $100 cash.

'BEATLES? MBE? YOU'RE JOKING!'

British Royalty 'Switched On'

(Times News Services)

LONDON—"St. James' Palace is switched on at last."

That was the reaction of The London Daily Mail to the news that the Beatles had been named Members of the Order of the British Empire (MBE).

Others were not so generous.

"MBE? You're joking, of course?" wrote Donald Zee, entertainment columnist of the mass circulation Daily Mirror.

The "startled" Zee conceded the four singers were "nice bunch of chaps" and a "showbiz phenomenon" who had parlayed their knack for lively songs into a multi-million-dollar enterprise. "But in the name of all that's sane if not sacred, isn't pinning a royal medal on to four Beatle jackets just too much?" he asked.

Inclusion of the Beatles in the Queen's birthday honors list was called "everything from 'whimsy' to 'mania'."

REAL GEORGE

Even Beatle George Harrison said: "I didn't think you got this sort of thing for playing rock and roll."

Each of the mop-haired singing quartet, whose hit records have earned a fortune for dollar-hungry Britain, was named a member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (MBE) in the Queen's official birthday today.

Their names—Harrison, John Lennon, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr—appeared alongside those of diplomats, sculptors, industrialists and publishers.

The Beatles were touched and surprised by the honor.

But Britain's editorial writers were largely aghast. The Beatles are the first such group ever to receive such an honor, and among the youngest ever to be members of the order, created by King George V in 1917.

Wall of Water Roars Through Town

—AP Wirephoto
TWISTED railroad tracks, derailed tank cars and relocated buildings are part of extensive damage which resulted Friday when wall of water swept through Sanderson, Tex. Fifty-gallon oil drums from demolished warehouse resting on tracks were spotted from air, miles downstream.

SANDERSON, Texas (AP)—Thirteen persons were swept to death Friday when a 15-foot wall of water roared through this small Texas town.

Eighteen other persons were missing from the flood that struck without warning. State police said the death toll was almost certain to mount.

An 11-inch cloudburst sent water gushing 15 feet deep through sluice-like Sanderson Canyon, demolishing 75 houses and a dozen business places, and isolated this far west Texas town for hours. Ironically, the rainfall in this arid spot averages only 16 inches a year.

As roads were slowly reopened, peace officers from 15 countries gathered to hunt on horseback for the missing.

FEED HOMELESS

Three hundred homeless were fed and sheltered in a school here. Up to 200 others were taken 65 miles north to Fort Stockton over the first route reopened.

Two and three feet of mud stood in ruined homes and stores.

A channel 10 feet deep was carved along the course of a normally dry creek in a canyon crossing Sanderson, a town of 2,350 people which is 20 miles from the Mexican border and about halfway between San Antonio and El Paso.

Up to 11 inches of rain at Longfellow, 20 miles west of here, funnelled down the canyon. The gushing torrent swept away some houses with people clinging to them, rose to the eaves of others and spread 500 yards in places.

Pickets Threaten Parade

CHICAGO (AP)—A ticket-tape parade here Monday for Gemini astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White may be picketed by demonstrators protesting alleged de facto segregation in the Chicago schools.

The possibility of demonstrations arose after more than 200 civil rights marchers were arrested Friday at a mass sitdown on a busy roadway on Chicago's lake-front.

Pickets "would not be permitted to interfere with the astronauts' line of march," Mayor Richard J. Daley said.

Albert Raby, a high school teacher who led the lake-front protest, told reporters that demonstrations would continue through the week-end.

"Starting Monday," he added, "we're going to see to it that it will be a long, hot summer for Daley. Every Negro who cannot march will be asked to turn on all his faucets and drain the water."

Some integrationists have indicated the astronauts' appearance for the parade will be greeted by demonstrations.

The protests arose from the rehiring of Schools Supt. Benjamin C. Willis, described by civil rights leaders as the man responsible for what they called de facto school segregation.

Space Twins Relax at Home Before Reception Schedule

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—James A. McDivitt and Edward White prepared today for what fellow astronauts have called "the toughest part of the mission"—the inevitable round of receptions, parades and celebrations. They relaxed at their homes near the space centre in Houston, resting for the busy week ahead.

It starts Monday with a ticket-tape parade in Chicago. There is a homecoming celebration Tuesday at the University of Michigan. Hometown welcomes are scheduled Wednesday in Jackson, Mich., for McDivitt, and in San Antonio, Tex., for White.

McDivitt and White got a surprise Friday—a "little something" from President Johnson in the way of promotions. They changed the gold major's leaves of their U.S. Air Force uniforms made on-the-spot promotions.

Franco-German Talks Produce Summit Plan

BONN (Reuters)—France's President de Gaulle and West Germany's Chancellor Erhard agreed today to propose a summit conference of the six European Common Market countries before the end of 1965, the chief West German government spokesman announced.

Usually well-informed sources said the conference is expected to take place in October.

The spokesman, Guenther von Hase, made clear at a press conference the proposed conference would be at heads-of-government level.

He also said the two leaders, in two days of talks which began here Friday, agreed on the general basis for financial regulation of the European Common Market's agricultural policy and of simultaneous development of other sectors of the community in trade, taxation, customs and industrial tariff.

Before von Hase's statement, de Gaulle met for an hour with former chancellor Konrad Adenauer, 89, who said their talks covered international and Franco-German problems.

Adenauer declined to comment on the talks, which he will report to Erhard.

De Gaulle said in a dinner toast that when the work of political co-operation in Europe is finished, "then others, if they want, can join the Six."

SUCCESS UNEXPECTED

French readiness to meet German economic policy views, and agreements reached Friday on co-operation in defence, have made the summit more successful so far than expected in view of recently increasing differences between Paris and Bonn.

German sources were skeptical, however, whether the French will be equally conciliatory about political unity.

De Gaulle said in his toast Friday night that Europeans are builders of a cathedral. "Today we—you and we—are building Western Europe," he said. "What a cathedral."

The foundation of this cathedral, he said, is Franco-German reconciliation. Its pillars were the Common Market "when it has been made fast."

"Then there will be arches and there will be a roof over it and that is what is called political co-operation in Europe."

Erhard said their talks showed up many differences in French and German thinking, but at no moment had there been any "hostility which could not be remedied."

VANCOUVER (CP)—Einar Gunderson, 66-year-old former B.C. finance minister and an adviser to Premier Bennett, has described as "silly" opposition demands for his resignation from executive positions he holds in government agencies because of his custodianship of a Social Credit fund.

Leaders of the provincial opposition parties—New Democratic, Liberal and Progressive Conservative—called for Gunderson's dismissal from government posts following disclosure that he is trustee and administrator of the B.C. Free Enterprise Education Fund.

Previously Gunderson said the fund was used for political campaign purposes for the Social Credit party as well as for other purposes.

DON'T INTERFERE

"There is no conflict," Gunderson said Friday. "There is only an election every four years or so. Besides I don't interfere in policy, I can't commit the government to anything." Gunderson, who holds executive positions in the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, the Ferry Authority and the government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway, said all purchasing done by these crown corporations is on a straight bid basis.

His critics had questioned whether there might not be a behind-the-scenes "shake-down" for a Social Credit fund contribution from firms doing business with the provincial corporations where Gunderson holds posts.

Gunderson said that his positions in the government corporations could indicate that he has considerable to do with the policy of those organizations "but that has nothing to do with political donations."

He added he hasn't even thought about breaking his connection with the political fund.

Clearing the Decks

THE GOVERNMENT MEASURE to revise the rules and procedures of Parliament has been approved after a 15-day debate which exemplified the delaying tactics which the reform measure is designed to eliminate.

Too much of the time of Parliament has been taken up with endless repetition of opinion, with speeches which should be reserved for election campaigns rather than the Commons, with windy addresses to impress the home constituents rather than contribute to the nation's law-making, but above all, with wordy barrages that have no other purpose than to delay the progress of the bill, tire out other speakers, and employ the mere passage of time as a tool to hinder the enactment of legislation.

The latter tactic—the filibuster or version of it—is in most cases used for narrow political purposes. It is basically designed to serve the purpose of a party rather than of the nation. The new rules—which are modelled on those of the Parliament of Britain—will set agreed limits on various debates while still providing necessary guarantees of speech. They will encourage the best use of Parliament's time, with the thought that coming to a decision on legislation is the prime purpose of the legislative body, rather than the mere recording of wordage.

In addition to putting a reasonable limit to debates, the reform measure provides for extending House discussion through lunch and dinner hours. It is essentially an attempt to make Parliament's time more efficient without sacrificing any right of free speech.

The conduct of the House during the past year or more brought the matter to a critical point. Some debates became a tedious farce and rightly earned the dissatisfaction of voters throughout the country. If the new rules and procedures help to remedy that situation we shall be much better served, and the present Parliament will be on record as one that made a major contribution to the machinery of government.

Riding Two Horses

MR. EINAR GUNDERSON'S admitted position as the man in charge of the Social Credit Party's campaign fund cannot be objected to. Nor can his influential presence on the policy-making bodies of the PGE, B.C. Hydro and B.C. Ferry Authority be challenged in principle. It is the fact that he combines the two types of office—the government utility and the government party's money-raising branch—that today is causing justified concern among the people of this province.

An employee of the provincial government should not be raising money through personal and corporation contributions for the party in power. Nor should a man in a high position on the directorates of Crown corporations or agencies be charged with the job of receiving donations from business firms and entities of various kinds which might have occasion to deal with the agencies. This is a blending of government and party interests which cannot help but create potential trouble, and likewise cannot avoid placing the incumbent on many occasions in an embarrassing position.

There is only one obvious course for Mr. Gunderson—as for the government—in the present circumstances. Mr. Gunderson should immediately relinquish all of his paid positions in the government's service, or he should make a clean break with the machinery of collecting party election campaign funds. It is odd that he has not seen the need for this.

How Fast Is Too Fast?

MR. W. ARCH BRYCE, EXECUTIVE director of the Canadian Highway Safety Council, finds something incongruous, in this day of high speed travel, in his organization's summer vacation campaign slogan "Slow Down and Live." But he gives a rational explanation of the advice.

"When the council advises motorists to 'slow down', all it asks is that drivers maintain a speed that allows them the utmost control of their vehicles," he says. "We don't want them to drive 20 miles an hour in traffic moving at 50, but neither do we want to see them moving at 50 in a 30-mph zone. They must realize that posted speeds are the result of study by experts and created for the safety of drivers."

The point is particularly pertinent on the Island Highway, where the winding road and blind corners have caused their share of accidents and where carefully computed limits are posted on signs that mean something.

On some stretches the "slow-poke" creates a hazard for the less patient drivers behind him, and the courtesy rule requires that he pull over to the side and let faster traffic pass.

Not Quite Enough

MR. BENNETT DENIES ANY implied discourtesy in his notice to Prime Minister Pearson that he can spare no more than two days for the federal-provincial conference next month. He explains that he and his colleagues have other undivulged public business that will occupy their time after July 20. And at any rate, "We'll be there two days. There's lots of time for us to state our case."

It may be long enough to state the case. It is extremely doubtful that two days will be long enough to hear, or understand other cases presented at a conference important not only to residents of this province as Canadians but to other Canadians as well.

In these times, it is questionable if many British Columbians will be satisfied with an approach which says little more than: "This is what we want. Now good day, gentlemen."

FROM WASHINGTON

Anxiety to Maintain Britain as a Stepping-Stone

A RECENTLY published comparison between 1929 and 1965 was quietly discounted as an overdrawn parallel but it is serving the useful purpose of attracting attention to the clouds that are adrift upon the economic horizon.

Great Britain is certainly one of these clouds. The nervous struggle by Harold Wilson's Labor government to find its economic and political feet has not gone well enough to stir any optimism that Britain will get through the year without another sterling crisis.

Cruel Mixture

Britain is actually threatened by a cruel mixture of inflation and deflation. The government's failure to impose its incomes policy, an imitation of the American wage-price guidelines, has brought on Britain's heaviest inflation in recent times, a nine per cent rise in wages and a five per cent rise in the cost-of-living in only seven months. At the same time the crisis of confidence and the monetary tightening have caused investments to slacken and deflationary pressures to develop.

Trouble Ahead

Britain's situation bodes trouble for the United States. The worst possibility is that a Conservative government might gain power and devalue the pound as its initial act. The external consequences of this step are viewed with frank apprehension by economists here. A lesser threat is that the British will be forced to draw upon the $250 million committed to them as a stabilizing reserve last November. Such a withdrawal from the Export-Import Bank will add new strains to the U.S. balance of payments.

As the Chancellor of the Exchequer,

James Callaghan, prepares to come to Washington to seek a closer alliance between the dollar and the pound, the Johnson administration seems ready to go the limit in support of the British economy. The motives behind this spirit are a selfish wariness of the chain effects of a British bankruptcy, a sentimental solicitude for Britain, and a political anxiety to maintain Britain as a stepping-stone to Europe.

Liquidity Crisis

Some experts suspect that Britain's difficulties may combine with other circumstances to create a liquidity crisis throughout the West before the end of the year. The patterns of international trade have been disrupted by America's defence of its gold and by the British surcharge on imports. American companies operating abroad, no longer able to draw capital from the United States, are gobbling up the European reserves to finance their expansions. This nation, still burdened with a balance of payments squeeze, can do little to ease the situation.

One developing cloud is the probable necessity to defend the dollar at home as well as abroad. The economists do not expect the unemployment figure to remain at last year's level of 4.6 per cent, the lowest in seven years. Unemployment will surely rise but the unions are expected with equal certainty to press for a larger share of company profits.

Dim Hopes

Only dim hopes remain that the steel negotiations this summer will be settled with a productivity increase that is too small to give the companies an excuse to raise their prices. The aluminum contract, which prompted immediate price increases, yielded a wage rise of 3.8 per cent. I. W. Abel and the other new officials of the Steelworkers' Union are certain to be unwilling to do less for the men in the steel mills than they did for their members in the aluminum plants.

President Johnson has not shown enough determination to hold the wage-price line to inspire optimism that it can be held against the pressures ahead. His yearning for business' friendship has inspired instead an equivocal attitude in Congress. There are no Estes Kefauvers now who speak up for the public and probe the administered price. Not one word has been uttered in Congress on the aluminum increases despite their critical significance to the economy.

Chief Concern

The danger is that the President, in his anxiety to please each segment of the population, has lost sight of the fact that the presidents of companies and the heads of unions are chiefly concerned with the welfare of their institutions. Only the President of the country is totally concerned with the welfare of the country and he might profitably recall the Serbian proverb: "It is impossible to keep the sheep intact and the wolves satisfied."

The nation will probably be spared any direct confrontation between the determination of the White House to sustain the expansion with easy money and the anxiety of the Federal Reserve Board to tighten money to avert inflation. The result of these differences will almost certainly be a negotiated compromise instead of an explosion because Martin is not the type of man who resigns in a pique.

The wisdom of this compromise will be important to the immediate health of an economy whose long-range outlook is excellent, whose stabilizers defy the threat of deep depression, and whose only discernible frailty is a slight fatigue.

MY WORD!

Deoppilative Approach to Verbigeration

FROM time to time there have been suggestions from the body of the hall that I overdo the long words in my weekly waffle. I can't say that this worries me into a decline, but whenever the criticism has been made, I have been driven to look back at the pieces I have written to see whether I had, in fact, been guilty of using long words unnecessarily. Of course I cannot pretend to be unprejudiced, but I must say I have never caught myself in the act of using long words when short words would have done just as well. You don't catch me saying "floccinaucinihilipilification", for instance, because it doesn't serve any very useful purpose, for all that it is in the dictionary. (New readers are advised that when the man says "the dictionary" he means the Shorter Oxford.)

In any case, the mere length of a word doesn't have anything to do with its difficulty. I have a notion that some of my objectors are really registering their displeasure at being faced with words that they are not familiar with, and if I am right in this conjecture I can only say that they should be grateful for the free gift of a new word. I myself feel a debt to those speakers and writers who have introduced me to words I had never come across before—good words, I mean—and I hope that this kind of painless education will continue as long as I live.

I agree with my critics that there is something a little vexing about writers and speakers who parade long words for the sake of impressing their readers and hearers, but there are writers—Samuel Johnson is one—who are so deeply immersed in the dead languages that some sonorous Latinized polysyllables have rolled out before them that they can think of a shorter expression: e.g., "There is a great deal of Spain that has not been perambulated."

It would not have been tactful for Boswell to point out to the Grand Cham that he might more easily have said "There is a great deal of Spain where no man has walked," and it is more than likely that the great man would have pointed out to his young friend that he had used "perambulated" because he meant something more than merely walking; in Johnson's time to "perambulate" frequently implied a fairly close inspection of the district through which one was travelling, a meaning that is absent from the shorter word.

I was exposed in my youth to scholars who used words that were familiar to them, and who were flattered enough to assume that they were equally familiar to me. I heard them use these words often; I looked them up in the dictionary; I came across them in books; and before I knew what was happening, these previously unknown words had become familiar friends. Isn't this what happens to us all when we are acquiring a vocabulary? Is there any reason why the process should come to an end when we have progressed beyond "dog" and "cat" to "automobile" and "grandfather" and "psychological"?

Since words are the usual vehicle of communication between one person and another, surely the more we have to choose from, the better we should be equipped to make ourselves intelligible to others.

I like poetry, and I have found it necessary to use the dictionary fairly frequently when reading certain poets. The late Mr. Eliot, for example, used to wring endless tones of meaning out of a vast vocabulary which ranged from the outer edge of Mandarin to the shortest monosyllables of the vernacular. Words like "hebetude" and "placulature"; "anfractuosity" and "chthonic"; if you shrink from the physical effort of handling a large dictionary (and the mental effort of acquiring knowledge) you won't enjoy Mr. Eliot. He will teach you, though, that it is not always the long word that baffles. In "The Dry Salvages" he says "...haruspicate or acry". Do you find the short word there any easier to define?

I am humbled every time I pick up the "Shorter Oxford" by the thought of the poverty of my own vocabulary. Here are 2,500 pages close-printed in three columns, with well over 50,000 words, and no page but bears a dozen words I have never used; some I have never seen, and more I have seen—but not heard. It is one of the benefits of some acquaintance with learned men that they hear them say words that other people, if they use them at all, only dare to write: words like "otiose" and "desuetude" that are not easy to pronounce.

You can meet people like this at a university, but it is not only the university student who can have this advantage, in a well-ordered society. When the BBC began its Third Program in Britain over 20 years ago it opened this door to everyone with a radio. (I remember the shock at hearing some savant use the word "vagaries", and finding that I had been mispronouncing it for years.) Much of the joy in life comes from learning: we learn to fish, and fence, and fly, and frug—and find it fun. Why not learn a few new words every day?

In Europe There Is a Swelling Tide of Anxiety About the Wisdom of U.S. Foreign Policy

By Walter Lippmann, who has just returned from a tour of European capitals

IT is fashionable in certain circles, I realize, to dismiss scornfully a serious concern about what foreign nations think of the United States. This is a reaction to the naive and often silly American wish to be loved by everybody. But the reaction has gone much too far, for it is not true that in the real world of affairs a great power, even the strongest, can afford to ignore the opinions of others. It cannot overrule them all. It must have friends who trust it and believe in it and have confidence that its power will be used wisely.

I make no apology, therefore, for reporting that in Europe today there is a swelling tide of disaffection and doubt and anxiety about the wisdom and competence with which U.S. foreign policy is being conducted. This statement is not based on a personal tour's Gallup Poll of taxi drivers and waiters. It is the result which anyone would get by going abroad and talking off the record and confidentially not only with the responsible officials, including Americans, but also with experienced reporters and editors. I do not think it can be denied that American foreign policy as now conducted does not have the confidence of our European Allies.

The opinion is wide and general that since the death of President Kennedy there has been some kind of radical change in the spirit of the U.S. government. This may not be true. But I heard it said almost everywhere.

When I argued that this was to idealize Mr. Kennedy and to forget his mistakes, that he and not Mr. Johnson had begun the increased U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia and that he, too, intervened in the Caribbean, the reply would be: "Yes, but the spirit of American foreign policy has changed dangerously since his death."

Comparing what I heard this spring with what I heard last November shortly after Mr. Johnson's election, it is plain to me that the loss of confidence of Europeans has been caused by actions taken by the President since his inauguration.

The Europeans had, of course, been unanimous in their fear of opposition to Barry Goldwater, and they have been stupefied to see President Johnson, with the applause of the Goldwater Republicans, doing in Viet Nam what Goldwater recommended and Mr. Johnson denounced during the campaign.

They do not pause to ask whether President Johnson has acted with greater deliberation and finesse than Sen. Goldwater would have done. What the Europeans did not expect was that the Goldwater recommendations about expanding the war, which were rejected overwhelmingly by the voters, would in such great measure be adopted by the victor.

There are afloat many attempts to explain this happening. The fantastic explanations need not concern us. What does matter is that this sudden and dramatic reversal of policy has bred cynicism about the President's speeches and has struck at the basis of confidence in his administration.

The unfolding events since February have had a cumulative impact upon confidence abroad. Most particularly the cumulative effect has been caused by the Dominican intervention on top of the expanded Vietnamese war.

It would not have been impossible to make a case that in Viet Nam the President had no alternative to sticking it out since Hanoi and Peking were rejecting negotiations. In fact, this view was fairly well accepted by our Allies, even by the French, who now expect a long and indecisive land war.

Nor would it have been wholly impossible to make a case that in the Dominican Republic the United States has a vital interest within its own sphere of influence.

What is almost impossible is to make a case for two interventions in two different continents at the same time.

When I say that it would not have been impossible to make a case for the one or the other, I am compelled to say at once that I am talking only of the justification for the original and initial decision. For Europeans have been deeply shocked by the manner and the style in which these two operations, especially the Dominican, have been conducted. Even more deeply, they have been shocked by the unlimited militarism and the rough unilateralism to which the President has resorted in explaining his decisions.

They see that in both ventures the President consulted none of his Allies, even though he may have kept them informed fairly well about what he had decided to do. I am sure that I am not exaggerating when I say that the spectacle of the most powerful nation on earth using its great military power without consultation, without the consent or sanction of its Allies, is regarded as ominous.

When I argued that Lyndon Johnson is a progressive and a man of peace, the reply was that there is nothing more dangerous than unlimited power exercised personally and unilaterally.

There is, I regret to say, more to this dismal story. For there is a strong opinion that in the personal and unilateral exercise of unlimited power the performance has been that of amateurs inexperienced in the use of power.

Those Europeans who are wise in the ways of power politics are astonished to see an American government capable of believing that it could by bombing North Viet Nam a little, but not too much, gain its political objectives in Indo-

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

A walk around the trails at Francis Park will show you many changes since the spring flowers finished blooming.

The Sword and Lady Ferns are perhaps at their very best, while the Bracken with its spreading branches dominates the undergrowth.

In the shady moss-covered openings the beautiful little Twin-flower is coming into blossom with its fragrant perfume which once smelled is never forgotten. Look for its shiny green leaves with the slender stems that carry pink "twin flowers."

On the open rock faces the Stone-crop's bright yellow star-like flowers are in profusion. Examine this plant and notice its fleshy leaves that store moisture to tide it over the dry summer weeks. The Room is in its glory of brilliant yellow blossoms. You will see the small peep-shaped pods that have already formed while other parts of the branch are still in flower. Some plants show red and purple shades.

The Salal is now starting to bloom; the urn-shaped flowers will hang like beads along the twig. Do you know that this plant belongs to the Heather family, and is related to the Arbutus tree?

Wander along the swamp trail—see how some of the Skunk Cabbage leaves are now over five feet tall. The Sedges are now in flower.

Growing in this habitat you will find the Brook-lime with its delicate airy blue clusters. Close by in the damp grass there will be the tiny St. John's Wort showing faint black dots on its yellow blossoms.

Growing here also will be the Hedge Nettle with its trumpet-like red-purple flowers that form a whorl. The stem of this plant is square. It belongs to the Mint family.

China. Having themselves been through the experience of being bombed, they do not think it competent to adopt the strategy of wounding your enemy just enough to make him thoroughly angry. And so, the side effect in Europe of the administration's conduct of affairs since February has been to undermine confidence in the wisdom and competence of American leadership. The most far-seeing of our friends abroad look upon our actions since February as a passing phase in American history. They believe that the American people are locked in a struggle between their old traditions and a new and recently acquired pride of power—a pride of power which so often in the newly powerful becomes impregnated with the Messianic illusion that single handedly they can impose their kind of peace upon the rest of the world and expand their kind of freedom to all mankind.

This internal struggle in the American conscience is a fateful one. When I am feeling cheerful and full of hope, I tell myself that what has happened since February has been Lyndon Johnson's Bay of Pigs and that, like his predecessor, he will learn wisdom from his failures.

INSIDE POLITICS

With Douglas Fisher, M.P.

(Mr. Fisher is the member for Port Arthur riding for the New Democratic Party.)

Secret Corridors of Power

OTTAWA—A price of $15 puts a book beyond the buying habits of most of us. When the book is serious, long, complex, and written without much literary grace or effort to popularize the arguments, it is unlikely to become a best-seller.

Despite these omens for an unsensational future, John Porter's The Vertical Mosaic: An Analysis of Social Class and Power in Canada seems to me as important as any work published in Canada this decade.

Its influence, its arguments and the further studies which will flow from them will put that stock topic "What is a Canadian?" within a new framework.

The author is a professor of sociology at Carleton, a somewhat dour, square-set man of middle years. He is not given to flights of fancy or sensationalism; he eschews gossip or the interview with important people as a source of information. Neither his character nor personality let him make many concessions to those who are ignorant of the disciplines of his subject.

It will be apparent to most readers if they are unaware of it from other evidence that Prof. Porter is radically inclined, that he pursues an ideal democracy. But this attitude merely gives point to the book, it does not dominate it.

The most successful by-product of the book is the clear outline it gives on the theories of class structure, especially the Marxian theory, and their worth today as frameworks within which to analyze a nation as it was, is, and may be.

The reader who completes the book gets the bonus (beyond its revelations of Canadian power groups and elites) of a good outline of the subject of sociology as it is today in the Western World.

The central revelation of Prof. Porter destroys a reigning myth that we have something close to a classless society in Canada.

Let me comment on this from my own experience. As a youth, as a miner, and later as a volunteer soldier in the last war, I came to a conclusion that a rather mysterious group of people whom I called THEY really ran things.

With more experience and education my sensitivity about THEM faded. The more I met those who seemed to exercise power and influence, the less frightful and the more ordinary they seemed.

So much in the way of opportunity and upward mobility in both economic and social terms was evident after the war that I had come to believe that THEY were no longer very important or relevant.

A lot of my conditioning to this classless view came from my home area of the Lakehead. It is too far from Toronto or Winnipeg or any other metropolitan centre to seem dominated by any distant authority. A high percentage of non-British immigrants created a melting-pot situation unusually free from overt discrimination because of religion or ethnic origin or paternal occupation.

The Porter thesis has not invalidated my view of the Lakehead as remarkably free of class consciousness and the brute use of class power. But lately I have come to realize that I was over-simplifying. The major decisions in economics such as a new pulp mill or the use of Crown lands or the kinds and character of our schools were being made largely by distant figures, usually in secret and often without explanation.

I know now that it is not the case that we have a classless society with everyone able to share in the major decisions. That is a far-off ideal, to which in a social sense, the Lakehead is only approximately a bit ahead of many other parts of Canada.

I know, and so do most others there, that the major decisions made in the corridors of power which shape our economy and society are made elsewhere.

What John Porter's book does for me is to identify those corridors of power and the smallish group of men who hold them. He shows their characteristics, their recruiting techniques, and their inherent inflexibility, plus their fear of change and openness.

The most disturbing message in his analysis is that THEY are not diabolically clever or Machiavellian or walled off and easily identifiable like feudal barons.

What they share are common attitudes, not a common plot to retain control. In the process by which so many of us enter into places in the elite system, (for example, in my attainment of a footing in politics and in journalism), these common attitudes, such as a belief in the easy availability of equal educational opportunity and the unimportance of family or religion, enter my mind and those of others, leaching away the bite and antagonism that we need to feel if we really want to achieve a more classless and more democratic society in Canada.

I would like to know if the Porter argument seems a little truth to you. That's why I advocate a study of it, whether you are among the elite or not.

ON THE TIMES

By ART STOTT

The Thin Man

FOR the last couple of weeks I have been uncharacteristically but understandably reticent on a matter which engrosses our household these days.

My silence, I suppose, is merely a mark of vanity. The man who wears a wig doesn't go around shouting about it. People who have artificial dentures seldom make a song and a dance about them unless they hurt. A certain self-consciousness restrains them.

So, also, it has been with me.

On one of the warm days in May—a day that encouraged me to take a plunge in Shawnigan, I slipped into my half-bikini and wandered down to our little beach.

The lady whose opinion I value most highly saw me in profile, formed a judgment and announced a decision.

"You're too fat," she said. "We'll do something about it."

I had been judged and found not so much wanting as over-abundant. This does nothing for a man's ego.

But we did something about my avoirdupois. We went to Ed's and bought a two-bit little booklet. The picture on its cover shows a big hunk of cheese and a martini. Inside, the printed matter offers the promise of reduced weight to those who will follow prescribed scales of carbohydrate intake. According to the book you can eat all you like provided you limit the carbohydrates to 60 grams a day—and the gram count for various foods and beverages is detailed in a series of tables. Liquor without mixers is zero.

In other words, you can consume unlimited quantities of certain foods but definitely not of others.

It is my misfortune that I have a glutton's appetite and two of my favorites are bread and potatoes. As a boy I even considered potato salad sandwiches a delicacy, and come Sunday night's roast beef dinner, I arrange it so that we don't have to put back in the refrigerator those golden-brown wholly delicious spuds cooked with the meat. Or at least I used to arrange it that way. Not now though.

'H-Bombs' From Outer Space

By JOHN DAVY

LONDON—A colossal, mysterious explosion which a 30-mile area of Siberian forest in 1908 may have been caused by a meteorite composed of "anti-matter" from some distant part of the universe.

This hypothesis, backed by some new experimental evidence, is discussed by three American scientists in the current issue of "Nature."

The explosion occurred in the Tunguska River basin, an extremely remote area, on June 30, 1908, but was first investigated by Russian scientists in 1927.

Local inhabitants remembered the event, describing a brilliant fireball, a wave of burning heat, and a shattering explosion. A herd of 50 reindeer grazing in the area was destroyed.

After the explosion, the nights were exceptionally bright in Europe for two months, and as far south as the Caucasus newspapers could be read at midnight artificial light.

Since the 1927 study there have been others, together with much speculation as to what could have caused such a tremendous blast, equivalent to a 35-megaton H-bomb.

One theory, proposed over 30 years ago independently by a Russian and an American scientist, was that Tunguska was hit by a comet, perhaps 300 feet in diameter, consisting mainly of frozen water, ammonia and methane, interspersed with small chunks of mineral matter.

The weakness of this theory is that a comet heading straight for the earth should have been spotted days or weeks before it arrived.

The latest anti-matter theory is advanced by Dr. Clyde Cowan, of the Catholic University of America, and Mr. C. R. Alturi and Dr. W. F. Libby, of the University of California. Astronomers have often argued that whole galaxies of anti-matter could exist as long as they are well separated from galaxies of our kind of matter. Every atom in the former would have a negatively charged nucleus circled by positively charged electrons ("positrons"), the opposite of our matter. But if anti-matter encounters our matter, the atoms will annihilate one another to produce a blast of radiation.

In their article, the American scientists argue that the annihilation of anti-matter meteorite over Siberia would have produced a blast of neutrons, which would have transformed atmospheric nitrogen into radioactive Carbon-14. They have analyzed the Garbon-14 content from successive rings of two large trees and have found a definite increase for the year 1908. This, they conclude, lends some support to their theory, although only a seventh of the meteorite's energy may have come from atomic annihilation. Where the rest came from remains a tantalizing question. (London Observer Service)

JOHN DIEFENBAKER: Leader without a party?

Even His Intimates Won't Follow 'Dief'

By PETER NEWMAN

OTTAWA—Events of the past week have demonstrated more clearly than ever that Canada's Progressive Conservatives are split into two barely compatible political movements—a Conservative Party which has no leader and a Diefenbaker Party, which has nothing else.

The man from Prince Albert who inhabits a world all his own which he roams vainly searching for the elusive touchstones of power, his unbowled figure and stern countenance still dominate any room he enters, but somehow he already gives the impression of being a character out of Canadian history, rather than a participant in the nation's daily life.

The most recent—and most serious—blow to Diefenbaker's self-esteem was the meeting he had with some of his caucus committee chairmen in his parliamentary office last Tuesday morning.

At the end of that dramatic confrontation, Diefenbaker must have realized that even his former intimates are now no longer prepared to accept him at his own evaluation.

He had hoped to lead his party into a full-scale filibuster of the Pearson government's proposed "guillotine" rule for cutting off parliamentary debate. This was the strategy with which he intended to trigger an election campaign that would return him one final time to the hustings, where he might re-establish his metaphysical contact with the "average Canadian" of his dreams.

Disapproval

But the caucus chairmen refused to collaborate in what they felt might be their own political liquidation. They pointed out with unaccustomed vigor that following last fall's flag debate, the Conservative Party could not afford to be tagged yet again with the obstructionist label. They expressed strong disapproval of Diefenbaker's stand against the reform of parliament.

Later that day, Diefenbaker backed down and presented the government with a mild compromise, allowing the "guillotine" rule to be turned over to an all-party committee.

What was significant about this encounter was not the fact that the Conservative caucus had disobeyed Diefenbaker's wishes. That happened before, when the moderates within the party overruled Diefenbaker's demand for a strong stand against the government's opting out legislation, late in the last session.

But on Tuesday, the moderates deliberately stayed away from Diefenbaker's office. He was forced to back down not by his enemies, but by his supporters.

While he was prime minister, Diefenbaker's inability to lead was clearly evident only to those who sat with him around the cabinet table—it never did penetrate to the backbenchers or to the party at large. But as more and more of his followers have become aware of his true character, the disillusionment has been translated into ever wider rings of abandonment.

Last February the executive of the party all but disavowed his leadership. Conservatives as disparate in age and outlook as Joe Clark, the 25-year-old president of the PC Student Federation and James Macdonnell, the 80-year-old "conscience of Canadian conservatism" have publicly condemned Diefenbaker's stewardship.

Disillusionment with the man from Prince Albert knows no geographical limits. In Saskatchewan—the heart and hearth of Diefenbaker's one-time popularity—the Conservatives are in serious financial trouble. Contributors to the party have all but dried up.

Federal MPs from the province were this week confidentially requested to subscribe $500 each, so that the party could at least keep open its small suite of offices in Saskatchewan.

Subscription

In Quebec, the Diefenbaker Party has ceased to exist and even the Conservative Party may take a generation to recover its legitimacy. Deep in the Tory belt of western Ontario, 12 of the 22 chairmen of PC riding associations deliberately stayed away when John Diefenbaker came to address them on May 27.

Then, last Tuesday, came the cruel blow when Diefenbaker's own tightening circle of caucus supporters refused to back him up. Trapped between his eroding authority and his desperate dreams, John Diefenbaker has become a politician without a party.

Time Is Healing the Wounds Of Saskatchewan's Medicare

By RON MACDONALD

REGINA—Time has soothed the wounds opened by the crisis-ridden introduction of Saskatchewan's medical care plan three years ago.

Time also has brought a change of government. Doctors say they feel they can work better with the present Liberal administration than with the former CCF government which launched the plan in 1962 over the vehement protests of the medical men.

Time has resulted in wide, though not unanimous, public acceptance of the compulsory, comprehensive scheme.

Most doctors and the executive of the Saskatchewan College of Physicians and Surgeons hope the passage of more time will bring changes in those features of the plan to which they have always objected.

Meanwhile the medical profession appears willing to live with the present plan, although Dr. Fred Wigmore of Moose Jaw, a member of the college council, says: "The wounds are still there and they'll come out in the open again if there's ever any more harassment of doctors."

Dr. Wigmore says the profession isn't looking for the new government "to make any changes right away."

"Time will show them that what we've been telling the people is true—there's something fundamentally wrong with this plan."

Fears Abuse

Saskatchewan citizens still debate merits of medical care, but with much less vehemence and persistence than in the first months after its introduction.

One opponent is Herb Padwick, a leading Regina businessman. At one time he was acting chairman of the Saskatchewan Keep Our Doctors committee, a now-defunct organization dedicated to delaying the start of the medical care plan in 1962 to prevent an exodus of unhappy doctors.

"I'm concerned about deliberate abuse of this kind of plan," he says. "You don't have to go to a doctor for a headache or a stomach ache, but lots of people are taking advantage of this plan to do just that."

This criticism is echoed by many doctors. They suggest imposition of deterrent fees—small out-of-pocket payments made by the patient for each medical service. As the scheme now stands, most medical services are fully insured and no out-of-pocket payment is required.

Mr. Padwick voices another common complaint of doctors when he says: "Government just can't run something like this as cheaply as private business. They've got so many people over at the commission (the plan's administrative headquarters) they don't know who they all are."

Typical of the many who support the existing plan is Myrtle Surjik. She, her husband, David, a consulting geophysicist, and their four youngsters have always been healthy.

"I don't think medical services are something you should peddle in the street. This plan brings medical insurance within the financial reach of everybody, including people like the chronically ill who couldn't get it before from doctor-operated agencies."

"Often the people who need medical care the most are the very ones who can't afford it or who won't insure the cost of it voluntarily. These are the people this plan helps."

Contract Broken

Mrs. Surjik says that when doctors closed their offices and provided only emergency service in Saskatchewan for three weeks in 1962 to protest the implementing of the medical care plan, she felt her doctor "violated a contract with me."

M. B. Derrick, executive director of the medical care insurance commission, the body that administers the medical care plan, says the last year has brought a marked improvement in relations between the commission and doctors.

(The Canadian Press)

Donald Tansley, former commission chairman, was replaced by Dr. R. G. Murray, an ophthalmologist, after the Liberals defeated the CCF government in last year's election. Doctors welcomed having a colleague as head of the plan.

Mr. Derrick says doctors have found that some of their fears have not been realized. They feared violation of the confidential nature of the doctor-patient relationship; state intervention in the practice of medicine, or a mass exodus of doctors.

The Liberals say they plan no change in the basic structure of the plan, including its compulsory aspect. But A. E. Blakeney, former CCF health minister, says this may reflect political considerations rather than a Liberal belief that a compulsory, comprehensive plan is preferable to a voluntary one. "You'd have to have rocks in your head to touch it," he says.

Total cost of the plan in 1964 was $23,155,388 and expenditures on medical services under the plan were $23.53 per capita. In 1963 total cost was $21,443,979 and per capita cost of medical services $22.25.

The government-appointed Thompson advisory planning committee on medical care said medical service cost increases could be expected to level off after four or five years as persons who were uninsured when the plan went into operation completed the transition to the point where they made full use of insured services.

THE GALLUP POLL

Indecision Big Complaint

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Over a period of 20 years only one criticism of government is never changing—excessive taxes. In 1955, taxes, government extravagances, too big a majority and immigration policies were the top criticisms; today it is taxes, weak and indecisive government, too many scandals and dislike of the new flag.

The question: "If you were asked to criticize the present Liberal government in Ottawa, what would your main criticism be?"

Too indecisive, not doing anything concrete, not keeping promises	15%
Taxes too high, cost of living too high, spend too much, raised their own salaries	12
Too many scandals, corruption	9
Do not like new flag, the flag debate	8
Poor leadership, cannot hold his party together	6
Poor handling of old age pensions, age should be lowered, larger amount for Canadian Pension Plan	3
Too much arguing and bickering	3
Not doing enough for farmers	3
Poor handling of French situation	3
No criticism of government	3
No opinion	18

Other criticisms included too much dependence on the United States, too much unemployment (only 1%), delays in social reforms, such as medicare. These all added up to 105% because some people gave more than one criticism.

Exact Replicas Of English Gardens

CITY BOASTS ONLY MINIATURE ON CONTINENT

By SUSAN FELLAND

Pink roses and blooming lilac bushes border winding stone paths through an English country village. A red schoolhouse, church, Crown and Anchor Inn and a grocery store nestle in a grove of willow trees while a windmill stands idly by.

But it's all no more than six inches high.

The English Gardens in Miniature—tiny replicas of famous English gardens—were designed by Ann Ashberry of Essex, is a permanent display at the Net Loft Restaurant by owners Theodora and Stanley Booker.

Miss Ashberry is famous for her miniature gardens, but to Mrs. Booker's knowledge this is the only one in North America.

The trees, which grow no more than six inches high, are naturally cultivated dwarfs and are not pruned as are the Japanese variety.

Mrs. Booker explained that these were originally old Alpine plants that became miniature because of poor soil and climatic conditions.

But the plants, other than being dwarfed, are in perfect condition.

The Queen's Garden—a replica of the one presented to Queen Elizabeth—features tiny wrought-iron fences and antique silver statuettes overlooking a four-inch lake sporting minute lily pads.

And the Roman Garden with its marble pillars and figures is enchanting enough to lead anyone up its marble stone paths.

But that's not all.

The gardens also feature two aviaries—one of real and rare birds, the life's collection of Noah Wolfe, and one of wood carvings, remarkably life-like.

Major attraction, at least to their way of thinking, is Rudolf and Son, five golden pheasants who, despite their brilliant technicolor plumage, hate to be bathed.

Indoors, the gardens take on a tropical atmosphere. Some of the tiny exotic plants have been growing for up to 46 years under glass without ever being touched, through a process of reconduction.

Everything is in miniature—even the two live ponies which stand 28 and 32 inches high, and Sidney the Black Shark, which is a collectors' shark, Mrs. Booker explained.

A penny arcade features Penny Picture Boxes, Whirl-The-Butler-Saw machines and early music-boxes dating back at least 100 years—all cranked by hand and requiring the English penny to operate.

Mayor R. B. Wilson officially opened the gardens Friday afternoon.

CHARMER IN COURT

Five-Cornered Love Tug-of-War

VANCOUVER (CP)—Albert Emerson Simpson, described in court as a charmer of women in the James Bond manner with stories that he was a secret agent, was remanded Friday on two counts of uttering forged acts of parliament which bore a replica of the signature of Governor-General Vanier.

Preliminary hearings of the charges against the 43-year-old construction worker, who once was a prison guard, will continue Monday.

Detective William Thorpe told magistrate's court that he compared three copies of the signature of the governor-general, obtained from the Queen's representative here Thursday, and said they were not the same as those appearing on the document's Thorpe is accused of forging.

Detective Thorpe described the signatures on the allegedly forged documents as "very poor imitations."

The crown charges that Simpson forged a parliamentary bill annulling his marriage to Alma Helen Simpson and another "act of parliament" to permit him to marry Christine Adelle MacLellan, a social worker and master of arts graduate from McGill University.

Miss MacLellan, and four other women witnesses not identified in court, testified that Simpson told them he was a secret agent, bound by oath not to disclose the exact nature of his work. Miss MacLellan said the man she believed to be her legal husband told her that he was the leader of a government, anti-communist, anti-fascist secret society.

She said she co-operated with him in his "top secret" work. On his instructions she had even placed a Vancouver citizen under continuous surveillance and later made a very detailed report on his activities and an analysis of his personality, supposedly for the "western area military commander."

BOUND BY OATH

Miss MacLellan and the other women witnesses told how Simpson used surreptitious code words, appeared and disappeared unexpectedly and told them his work could not be disclosed to the police.

All five women, including Simpson's legal wife, Alma Helen Simpson, told the court how he charmed them, that they believed his stories about secret work and that they had been ready to help him track down the "enemies" of Canada and the western world.

The women witnesses testified that it was they who had been "running after" Simpson in the five-cornered love tug-of-war that ended in court.

Mrs. Simpson, called by the defence, testified that her husband is a good father and said he had always kept her and their two children through his work.

Maple Leaf Replaces Coat of Arms

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister MacEachen announced Friday that the federal coat of arms—being dropped from the country's social insurance cards in favor of the new maple leaf symbol.

The Conservatives branded the announcement a "disgrace."

Mr. MacEachen told the Commons the change was prompted by the desire of some provinces to use the cards, which gives each Canadian wage earner a number for social security programs, in some of their own plans.

The coat of arms, which carries the lion, unicorn and crown, is a "distinctly federal symbol" and thus "inappropriate" for the card under these circumstances.

It will be replaced by the maple leaf, a symbol "equally appropriate" for both federal and provincial programs, with the word "Canada" superimposed over it.

(Said Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre):

"It is a disgrace that this government should continue this whittling away of our historic traditions. The minister gave a very weak excuse for removing the coat of arms which surely is the most distinctive symbol of all of our national unity."

B.C. Lawyer Vindicated By Benchers

VANCOUVER (CP)—The B.C. Law Society has vindicated a lawyer criticized by a magistrate for giving evidence in a drunk case in which his partner was defence counsel.

Secretary Alfred Watts said Friday the society's benchers disagreed with Magistrate Cyril White that it was not proper for lawyer Gordon Dowling to testify that the accused, originally his client, was not drunk when he visited the man in jail after his arrest.

Mr. Dowling, an NDP MLA, said he turned the case over to his partner, Bill Deverell, when he was unable to get other evidence to show the man was not drunk.

"The benchers found no breach of good practice. They would disapprove the calling by counsel of lawyer where the evidence he could give could be secured elsewhere," Mr. Watts said.

Sea Control Hard Won In Combined Operation

The author's own introduction would serve, in itself, as a good, though modest, review of this excellent book.

After observing that the fact, for common to all the various campaigns in and around the Mediterranean from 1939 to mid-1943 was, to both antagonists, the prime importance of control of the sea and supply routes, he announces the purpose of his book: to outline how this "prelude to victory" was won by the British in the face of tremendous disadvantages and staggering odds.

In this intention he not only succeeds admirably, but his story brings into clear focus, for the average reader, the supreme importance of combined operations and the complete interdependence of the three branches of the armed forces, together with the merchant navy, in the situation which then existed.

Malta is best remembered by a large percentage of the reading public as a courageous island, specially honored with the George Cross for gallantry and endurance under constant bombing; closely associated are the dangers braved and losses sustained by its supply convoys.

This image tends to overshadow the tremendously important offensive role played by this indispensable base, which resulted in the eventual strangulation of the Axis supply lines and, in consequence, final victory in the whole war. With the under-emphasis so characteristic of the "Silent Service," and with generous tribute to the enemy whenever deserving, the facts are effectively assembled to present a clear picture to the most uninformed landsman.

It tells not only how the Royal Navy triumphed—but how so many of them died; despite the lack of "heroics," one can almost see the White Ensign fluttering and hear the strains of "Hearts of Oak."

The devotion of the airmen, often in the face of great odds, is not forgotten by the author. The book is profusely illustrated with official war photographs, too many of which, alas! depict the death-throes of gallant ships. Unreservedly recommended.

Truman Proposal Shrugged Aside

THE WHITE HOUSE YEARS: MANDATE FOR CHANGE, 1953-1961. By Dwight D. Eisenhower. Signet Books, 1965. 661 pp. Maps, illustrations, appendixes, and index.

Reviewed by James E. Hendrickson

After the armistice with Germany in 1945, President Harry S. Truman rode through the streets of Berlin with Supreme Allied Commander Eisenhower and abruptly announced that he would support Eisenhower for any position he wanted—including the presidency in the next election.

With characteristic modesty Eisenhower laughed off this "astounding proposition" and effectively squashed both Republican and Democratic overtures in 1948.

By 1952, however, the general was concerned enough about the extreme isolationism of the right wing of the Republican party to accept the nomination, and thirty-four million Americans persuaded themselves that the recent military hero was the man best qualified to win the peace.

Despite Eisenhower's stated conviction, his election was hardly a "mandate for change"; in retrospect it appears rather to have represented a basic continuation of modified New Dealism at home and determined interventionism abroad.

Eisenhower temporarily arrested the move to the left, but in the end he did not reverse it. Mandate for Change, now available in this unabridged paperback edition, is the first volume of Eisenhower's presidential memoirs; presumably a future volume will cover his second administration.

Like so many political memoirs, the book fails to reveal much new or startling information, but it does show rather clearly those personal qualities that made the man so attractive to the American electorate: an open and forthright honesty, a dogged fortitude and patience, and a disarming sort of genial medi-

OPEN SHELF

By John Mika

Whoever said there is no royal road to learning? Certainly not the encyclopedia companies. Probably like yourself, I recently had my mailbox stuffed full with a slick, expensive advertising brochure put out by one of these firms. (It's an annual chore crying loose this unsolicited junk from my rather small rural box. And if there's any legitimate mail in it at the same time, invariably that is crushed and torn during the removal operation.)

"Pick up any volume—turn to any page and start reading," the high-priced advertising copy says. "Here you will discover not a page of dull, dry facts—but the liveliest kind of reading—reading that will keep your eyes glued to the pages until you lose all track of time."

(First, I don't like anyone gluing up my eyeballs and, secondly, I don't consider losing track of time a great favor. But here comes the big pitch . . .)

Lure of a Phony Literacy

"If you adopt this pleasant plan of reading you will acquire—even in a few weeks—a vast fund of information, a factual background that lets you talk easily, entertainingly and intelligently on the widest range of subjects."

Get that? They're offering you "instant education," absolutely painlessly. It only costs money, a fairly hefty sum but after all they thoughtfully throw in . . . pardon . . . "furnish this impressive bookcase—especially designed to hold your (encyclopedia)!"

That's my main beef against these encyclopedia firms. They're not selling books of knowledge so much as the lure of a phony literate image for people who feel the need of one. Pandering, I'd call it.

Reading an encyclopedia is a boring exercise because by its very nature it is a dull and incomplete tabulation of facts. There isn't room for even the barest survey of any subject and interesting writing too in the small space allotted—and 24 volumes is a mighty small repository of the general knowledge accumulated by mankind, however large it may seem at first sight.

Intellectual Facade Offensive

But this brochure claims that "there's nothing better for the purpose than the 'fun reading' you'll find in every page of your Britannica."

I'm not against encyclopedias. They're very necessary and extremely handy for quick reference. But they also go out of date very quickly, especially in today's world, and if it really is knowledge that is sought it is readily available in a library reference department.

To invest more than $100 simply to have a stack of gold-stamped books in the house as an intellectual "front" is offensive and only the gullible would fall for the line that merely buying a set of expensive books will improve their children's grades at school.

Only those who lack native intelligence and common sense would be deluded into thinking they can obtain wisdom by spending their time reading at random a series of articles on every subject under the sun.

Facts Available in Census Too

Facts, sure, there are millions of facts to be obtained this way but facts are available in the census report and umpteen other publications too that don't cost anywhere near as much. And time spent reading through useless information is time lost for looking up something that has aroused curiosity.

Reading an encyclopedia for its own sake is as senseless, in my opinion, as reading a dictionary for its own sake. (That's another bugbear of mine—these vocabulary improvement programs. It's very easy to spot anyone who had gone out on a deliberate policy of learning words so he can drop them, because rarely do they use the words with the proper connotation.)

But the moment a word or a subject has you perplexed, that's the time to refer to these works—after all, they are reference works and not, despite all the sales ballyhoo, general interest books.

That's the road to learning, and it costs something more than money or light reading.

High Humor Wears Thin Too Soon

THE JOYOUS SEASON, by Patrick Dennis. Longmans, 1965. 230 pp. $5.50.

Reviewed by R. G. Lawrence

What a splendid book this is for the first two chapters! This slick, sophisticated novel has an extremely funny beginning, but humor of this kind is difficult to sustain.

Eleven chapters reported in the flippant, vulgar slang of a precocious eleven-year-old boy can wear rather thin, especially when the plot situation is trite and predictable.

For seemingly trivial reasons, Kerry's parents determine to get a divorce, as the result of varied Christmas contretemps (hence the title), and the reader is introduced to as varied a collection of eccentrics and characters as never existed outside of New England urban fiction.

Mr. Dennis hovers uneasily between the funny situations (some of them hilarious) and the divorce situation (close to sticky).

He is, however, thoroughly successful in flinging a variety of barbs at American social and sexual mores, modern education, and especially at child psychology.

This is a disappointing novel, because it could easily have been so much better, but the memory it leaves behind is almost of uncouthness.

SPACE AGE is expressed by Montreal sculptor Robert Rousil in this elm wood abstract sculpture. It was commissioned by the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts. Called "Competition," it stands seven feet high, depicts "man in space—the spirit of man in the modern world," according to its creator.

crop, which includes, among others, scientists Alan Nunn-May, Klaus Fuchs and Bruno Pontecorvo.

TRADED

The United States plays its part in roles acted out by the Rosenbergs, Colonel Rudolf Abel, who was traded for U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers, and a host of minor characters.

Treachery, explains Dame Rebecca is a problem we will have to live with for a long time, and the nearest we can come to a solution is to recognize the problem for what it is. Nowadays, one may add, a traitor is frequently an ideologically misguided individual, who in one form or another will be with us as long as divergent ideologies are warring.

For its security the state must look to its counter-intelligence services, which in Britain at least bungled the Job on several occasions, as the author graphically portrays.

The New Meaning of Treason is excellently written and instructive even for readers of Rebecca West's earlier work on the same theme.

Apart from its literary merit it does not make for enjoyable reading—it is frightening, it is disturbing but it is also topical and important.

Author Explores Judas Complex

THE NEW MEANING OF TREASON, 374 pp; New York, The Viking Press; $8.75.

University of Victoria

This book follows an earlier work by the same author, The Meaning of Treason, which was published in 1947. To the old version, which dealt largely with Fascist traitors and which was described by the eminent philosopher Sidney Hook as "a now-classic study," has been added a postwar list of traitors.

The new faces are familiar to us from recent news columns and consist primarily of English and American Communists.

The first part of the book and the beginning of the second contain up-dated accounts of the careers of Lord Haw-Haw and John Amery. The remainder analyzes the new

Stars of Noon Show To Shine on Sunday

A shorter program and a later starting time—2:30 instead of 2 p.m.—are the slight adjustments in the format of the second Sunday afternoon "Best of the Noon Shows" concert at McPherson Playhouse.

Otherwise the program for this Sunday maintains the level of quality of the first while it offers some different artists.

Tickets, which should be purchased beforehand, are available at Eaton's or the Playhouse box office.

Soprano Adele Lewis, 1964 music festival Rose Bowl winner, will open the program accompanied by Joan Bulmer who will also be heard as a piano soloist in Poulenc's Mouvements Perpetuels.

Duo pianists who delighted last Sunday's audience, Ken Bertram and Norman Abbott, will return playing the Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn.

Martin Chambers, baritone; Vivienne Abbott, violinist, and Gail Wall, pianist, are also on the program.

A scene from the ballet, Giselle, and Dance of the Hours will be presented by Vivian Briggs Dancing School, with Kathleen McCreesh accompanying at the piano.

Next week's lunchtime concert series will feature pianist George Fairfield and violinist Stan Marachek on Monday.

NORTH BREEZES
Alright, who's got it—that precious log that until this spring was the Douglas cherry tree?
Planted a century ago by our first governor, Sir James Douglas it was quietly loved by many Victorians who sadly noted its approaching death from old age.
Before the axeman came we planned to suggest the felled tree be given to some worthy charity so that it could be rendered into chips and sold as souvenirs—or carved into souvenir pipes, or into a bust of Douglas himself.
But we slept on the idea and awoke to find the Douglas cherry gone from Elliot Street.
Or is it? We can't believe those noble boughs have been burned. Come on now—who's got it?
IMPERIAL congratulates this week to veteran educator Harry Smith, now on his second retirement; to award-winning Navy first-aid PO E. R. Harris; to top police marksman at a Vancouver shoot-out Const. Norman Hansen and to forestry poster prize-winner Harry Barber.

He Had Hollywood on a Platter But Plummer Turned His Back

By DICK KLEINER
HOLLYWOOD (N.E.A.)—

Fame and fortune, to Christopher Plummer, are not enough. He is one of those increasingly rare actors who would rather have a rich part than just be rich.

And so, once again, he is turning his broad back on Hollywood, just when he could, if he chose, wrap this town up and put it in his safety deposit vault.

After his lead opposite Julie Andrews in "The Sound of Music" and his just-finished starring role with Natalie Wood in "Inside Daisy Clover," he is on the threshold of movie greatness.

But he has decided to leave to go to England and do a limited engagement in "Peer Gynt" on the London stage and then see what develops. It has been this way since he was in his 20s. Then, as a brilliantly promising Canadian actor, he had several Hollywood offers. He turned them all down, without batting a blank cheque.

"I reached a decision early in my career," Plummer says, "that I would stay with the stage in my 20s. I decided to limber up on the classics. When I finally accepted a film offer, in my 30s, I had enough experience.

"I remember once meeting Gerard Philippe, who told me that he had made a great mistake in accepting a movie offer when he was quite young. 'I never regretted my decision,'

How much money that decision cost him is incalculable. To most young men, the thought of that kind of money would be unbearable; it would be enough to make them forget their ideals. But Plummer has always been dedicated to the pure in the theatre.

In fact, he is almost convinced that his love of the classics is an indication that he is a reincarnated 19th century man.

"Of course, Plummer likes money—at least, he likes to live well. He always has; his childhood was spent in a well-to-do home in Montreal.

"I really don't need very much," he says. "Just enough so I can have a nice house in London and a small place in the south of France."

These basic needs have been fulfilled. He has the house in London—a lovely old place, within walking distance of Mayfair and the theatres—and the small place in the south of France.

And so, with that out of the way, he can devote himself to the pursuit of art, not cash. He feels that the money mania is one reason American actors are not as good as English actors today.

"American actors are spoiled," he says. "They have too much money and not enough experience. In America, an actor can do one part and get his name above the title. They aren't forced to do many things first, so they never get the experience they need.

"Most American actors try to act like businessmen—which, indeed, they are."

This last trait, Plummer believes, accounts for the lack of eccentricity among American actors. And this, he feels, is a crying shame. He believes the eccentricity of English actors—witness Olivier, Burton, O'Toole—is a plus factor.

"There are only a few American actors who are eccentric enough to act like actors," he says. "Jason Robards is one. Lee Remick is another."

Summer School Brings Students From Far Places

The third annual session of the Victoria Summer School of Music will take place in Victoria, July 12 to Aug. 20.

During its two years of existence the Victoria Summer School of Music has attracted students from such distant points as Minneapolis, Palo Alto, Calif., and Ottawa. This year enquiries have come from students in Venezuela and Switzerland.

A number of public concerts were given last summer featuring an orchestra of 50 players, several ensembles and various soloists. Two of these took place in the ballroom of the Empress Hotel.

Head of the piano department will be Dorothy Swetnam, who has toured in recent years with many leading concert artists, who has performed as a soloist in many parts of the globe, and whose pupils have won many awards in Canada and Europe.

She taught for several years at the Banff School of Fine Arts, and recently was heard in a recital sponsored by Harvard University in Boston.

Clayton Hare will be in charge of the orchestra, ensembles and string teaching. At present a professor at Boston University in charge of the symphony orchestra, he was for eight years Dean of Music at the University of Portland, Ore.

The classes here this summer will meet daily, sometimes out of doors, and the summer school will last for six weeks. Further information for interested students may be obtained from the Victoria Summer School of Music, Box 381, Victoria, or from Clayton Hare, 50 Browne Street, Brookline, Mass.

A limited number of scholarships will be available.

All He Needs Is One Hit

The better clubs pay handsome fees to top artists and Jock hopes to be up there himself within the next year or so. He has been on programs with entertainers who were being paid a thousand pounds a week and fees can go as high as two thousand.

"If I made a hit record I'd be there," he says. Tony Hatch of Pye Records believes he can do it. He has even written some songs specially for the Scots-Canadian singer, and when Jock goes back in the next few days it will be to do some recording—besides fulfilling a big schedule of club and TV engagements.

"If I did get a hit I'd be insane not to stay, but otherwise . . . I don't know," he told me.

"It's a good life for me, even if it is a high-pressure business, but it's hard on Joan (his wife) and the children. They don't see much of me, what with engagements, rehearsals, studying lines and learning songs.

"We have a lovely place, a charming, typical cottage and half an acre of ground, but I'm often away from it for weeks at a time," he says.

Jock reacts like an artist to much of the beautiful Scottish countryside, but he doesn't think much of the storied Isle of Skye, beloved of the poets.

The authorities have just managed to overcome the scandalized resistance of the residents toward operating a ferry service on Sunday," he grins, "but I can't think why anyone wants to go there. It's black and dreary looking—except when the heather's blooming.

"I think the poet must have written his verses sitting in the middle of a clump of blooming heather."

When Jock flies back to Scotland this weekend he will leave his wife and their two children to spend the summer in Joan Dunbar's native Victoria.

And he'll leave quite a bit more of himself here, too, through the warm, vital personality that makes him a never-to-be-forgotten friend and acquaintance, through the pleasure he has given with his fine gifts and through his affection for the city he himself says, "Will always be home."

Peltzer Acclaimed

When Dwight Peltzer played for a CBC radio engagement in Montreal last week, he scored a triumph.

Performing the Mozart Concerto in A major with the McGill University Chamber Orchestra, reinforced by top Montreal string players and conducted by Otto-Werner Mueller, he was enthusiastically applauded between each movement by the orchestra members, and immediately reprogrammed by CBC Montreal management for further broadcasts next winter.

"He played like an angel," says Mr. Mueller, who while in Montreal, also conducted a recorded performance of the Kurt Weill-Bertolt Brecht opera, Happy End, for CBC.

It will be heard on the West Coast on Sunday, June 20. Mr. Peltzer is on the faculty of the Victoria School of Music and was filling his first CBC Montreal engagement.

The famous pair met with director Nick Castle and members of Miss Lee's rhythm combo to plan her reteaming with Benny after a lapse of 22 years.

Peggy sang with Goodman for only two years, 1941 to 1943, but their collaboration remains a memorable one. It returned recently when Benny dropped in to hear Peggy at Basin Street East in New York. He got up on the stand, borrowed a clarinet and noodled with Peggy through a few choruses of a Beethoven tune, Hard Day's Night. The audience went wild. "Why don't you come out and play Melodyland with me?" Peggy asked.

"Why not?" answered Goodman.

So here they are. If the engagement is a success, it may lead to more engagements to gether.

The whole thing started back in 1941, Goodman said, when he and his wife dropped in for a nightcap in the Ambassador Hotel in Chicago.

"I heard this girl sing and right away I knew she had something," he said. "I was always looking for new talent, so I decided to give her a try."

Benny and Protegee Staging Reunion

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It was a meeting at the summit, a sentimental reunion of Peggy Lee and her oldtime boss, Benny Goodman, in her penthouse apartment high above the Sunset Strip.

The famous pair met with director Nick Castle and members of Miss Lee's rhythm combo to plan her reteaming with Benny after a lapse of 22 years.

Round World in 80 Days ... For Less Than $1,000

By ERIC WILSON
MONTREAL (CP)—It may sound rough and ready, but freighters are becoming increasingly popular as an inexpensive and comfortable means of travel.

Passengers number at the most 12, delicious meals at the captain's table are often preceded by a drink in a luxurious bar and some lines provide movies.

The best part is the low cost. First-class freighter accommodation from Montreal to England averages $180 one way, with some berths as low as $135. Comparable passenger liner fares run from $200 to $325.

And you needn't restrict your travels to England. A booklet available for $1 (U.S.) from Harian Publications of Greenlawn, N.Y., lists 700 world-wide freighter routes which can take you from Pago Pago in the South Seas to Reykjavik, Iceland. Around the world in 80 days by freighter can cost less than $1,000.

A recent arrival here from England was Norholt, a 7,900-ton Norwegian freighter on charter to the Bristol City Line. Besides a cargo which included British cider and sports cars, she carries seven passengers on the 10-day trip.

Aboard were a Yorkshire couple bound for a visit with their son who emigrated to Toronto a year ago, a Welsh brother and sister who planned to spend three months seeing North America by bus, a woman from Hertfordshire headed for a visit with friends in Chicago and a Canadian journalist and an American engineer homeward-bound.

PRIVATE SHOWERS
Their accommodations included air-conditioned single and double oak-paneled cabins with private showers, a spacious lounge with comfortable easy chairs and large windows overlooking the sea and a dining room where informal meals were enjoyed with the captain, first mate and chief engineer.

On a snowy-white tablecloth lay plates of cold cuts, salads, seafoods and a variety of hot dishes. Two Norwegian stew-ardesses provided royal service for the travellers right down to afternoon coffee. The Captain's Dinner—highlight of most freighter trips—featured candlelight and wine.

Cutting through the North Atlantic at speeds averaging 15 knots, the Norholt was out of sight of land for only five days. The passengers filled the hours with card games, a movie, books from the ship's library and radio programs over loudspeakers in the lounge.

On the sixth day the rocky southern coast of Newfoundland was sighted and from then—as porpoises played by the bow—the discovery of Canada held the attention of all.

The ship passed up the St. Lawrence from the rugged beauty of the snow-clad Gaspé Peninsula hills to tiny farming villages marked by the slender beauty of their church spires.

There was an unexpected one-day visit to Quebec City while the Norholt unloaded a British-built crane at a Lauzon shipyard. Then back to the river and a day's sail to the skyscrapers of Montreal.

EXPLORING SPANISH GALLEONS ...

Treasures (maybe) Lie Buried Under Sea

Buried treasure! Sunken gold! The beautiful Caribbean islands abound with countless claims of long lost riches lying buried in the earth or in the sea. While the tales of sunken treasures are often vague and mythical, being based generally on stories handed down through many generations, the four Spanish galleons lying a few fathoms deep about a mile off Trinidad are said to have had considerable gold and silver on board at the time they were sunk.

The ships, Spanish men-of-war, have been lying in 40 feet of water in the Bay of Chaguanas off the northwest tip of Trinidad and quite close to the old Spanish fort on the island of Gasparée for the last 168 years, and recent attempts to salvage relics from them have provided an intriguing and absorbing hobby for both professional deep-sea divers and amateur "scuba" enthusiasts.

Ships Burned

These ships were deliberately burnt by orders of the Spanish Admiral Apodaca. Identifiable articles recovered so far have included porcelain coffee cups, silver coins, wine pitchers, brass cannon, drinking flasks, iron cannon, cannon balls, cannon wheels, pulley blocks, etc.

The wrecks are scattered over 200 by 50 feet of ocean floor and although the remains of one ship lie only some 30 yards from the Gasparée shore, conditions for the recovery of relics are not good.

Visibility even on a clear day is only between six and eight feet, and it can drop to as low as two. Silt and mud have slowly but surely seeped into the ships, so that if any disturbance is made, black smoky grit clouds over the water, making it extremely difficult to extricate articles.

Covered by Coral

Most of each ship has settled into the mud and what remains visible is covered by coral and barnacles.

Articles that have been recovered are in very delicate condition and generally are soft and fragile. This is hardly surprising for not only have they had to survive the normal deterioration of age, including the wearing effects of the sea for so many years, but they were subjected to fire and explosion when the ships went down.

The destruction of the vessels in February 1797 marked the end of Spanish rule on Trinidad and the beginning of British occupation. The ships were part of a squadron of five new ships which set sail from Spain towards the end of 1796 carrying a large contingent of military troops and a big payroll in silver and gold consigned to the Spanish Viceroy at Caracas.

Answered Appeal

Calling at Trinidad en route, the squadron commander, Admiral Don Sebastian Ruiz de Apodaca, responded to an appeal for protection made by

WILL SWAP SUNSHINE FOR RAIN

HAMILTON (AP)—Bermuda, the land of sunshine, gladly would swap the parching glow for a week of steady rain.

The drought-stricken British colony is considering paying $66,000—much of it in shipping charges—for 4,000,000 gallons of water from the United States.

For its drinking water Bermuda depends largely on rain caught in the gutters of the picturesque white-roofed houses and drained into basement tanks.

But the rainfall has been well below normal since the beginning of the year. In May it was only .36 of an inch, and would have been below the lowest recorded for May—.8 of an inch in 1889—if a brief cloudburst had not come on May 31.

The Spanish governor of the island, Don Josef Maria Chacon, and landed the force at the island's capital, Port of Spain.

At that time England and Spain were at war and the town expected an attack from the enemy. In addition, it was in a great state of internal disorder owing to continuous rioting by the French residents.

The Spanish admiral anchored his ships, the San Vincente, 84 guns, the Villardo, Arrogant and San Damaso, all 74 guns, and the Santa Cecilia, a frigate of 36 guns, under the shelter of two old forts constructed on the island of Gaspar Grande (now called Gasparée) and repaired and mounted one of the forts with 20 guns and three mortars.

Killed by Fever

Fever spread among the sailors, killing many and leaving those who survived in a weak and demoralized state. The admiral was anxious to set sail, but the governor, convinced that the English would soon attack, begged him not to leave Trinidad defenceless.

His fears were justified on Feb. 16, 1797, when the English fleet under Admiral Henry Harvey was sighted. The squadron, comprising the flagship Prince of Wales, four 74-gun men-of-war and 15 other vessels, made an imposing array as they beat up to Port of Spain and anchored off the nearby islands, encircling the Spanish fleet.

The inhabitants of the town, anticipating a great naval battle, rushed to the waterfront, but by nightfall no action had taken place. The crowd stayed on, however, and eventually, at 1:30 in the morning, the sky to the west burst into an orange glow, illuminating the sea for miles around. Explosion after explosion shook the night air, and it was obvious to everyone that some disaster had overtaken the Spanish ships.

The English admiral had decided to attack at daybreak and was as puzzled by the events as anyone. Later it was learned that the Spanish vessels had been burnt by order by their commander, who realized that he was hopelessly outnumbered. All sank with the exception of the San Damaso, which was taken as prize by the English sailors.

Little interest was shown in the Spanish wrecks until nearly 100 years later when a group of Americans, convinced that the gold and silver payroll was still to be found, obtained permission to commence underwater explorations, on the condition that the Trinidad government receive a proportion of any find.

The government did in fact receive a boatload of old copper and two small cannons, but when an official boat went to the site one day to investigate, the Americans had disappeared—whether with or without enormous riches has never been discovered.

CANADA'S WORST MINE DISASTER . . . IN DWINDLING VILLAGE OF HILLCREST

Where 193 Died... Neglected, Forgotten

Forgotten and unmarked, in a corner of Alberta near the B.C. boundary, lies the scene of Canada's greatest mining disaster.

No historic sign marks the spot. No sign points the way from the busy Highway 3—through the Crow's Nest Pass. Yet just one mile from this highway, travelled by thousands of tourists each year, lies the dwindling village of Hillcrest.

And 51 years ago this month, it was the scene of a terrible explosion that killed 193 men—a record unsurpassed in Canada's history of mining accidents.

Only 48 of the 241 miners who climbed to the pen entrance 700 feet above Hillcrest on that day survived.

The greater part of the male population of the village of 300 was killed.

Some of the miners were found dead transfixed, from gas poisoning, with picks in hand.

Nearly all the men were buried in a single plot in a cemetery overlooking another disaster—the 1903 Frank slide, when 90 million tons of limestone fell on the neighboring mining village killing 76 persons.

The Victoria Daily Times told of terrific destruction within the Hillcrest mine, following a sharp explosion. Some of the men were killed by the blast, some from falling debris and others from gas.

The precise cause of the explosion was never learned.

A reporter at the scene related that rescuers worked feverishly and without pause to bring out the coal-coated bodies, wash and dress them and send them to the temporary morgue in the village below.

At the wrecked pithead,

Story, Photos
By Roger Stonebanks

everything was calm and orderly.

"The miner appears to accept death as a matter of course and the women weep in silence while they watch the bodies of their loved ones brought to the surface," said one account.

King George V was among many sending telegrams of condolence. He said: "I am grieved to hear through the press of the terrible disaster at the Hillcrest coal mine."

The federal government gave $50,000 to the relief fund and the mine's owner, Canadian Pacific, gave $20,000.

In addition, the family of each dead man was entitled to $1,800—a total of $347,400.

Two hundred coffins were ordered from Winnipeg and 80 men toiled all day digging graves. The funeral services lasted nearly 12 hours.

The explosion was the first serious accident the mine had since it was started in 1905.

Hillcrest was named after C. P. Hill, who founded Hillcrest Collieries and sold out to the CPR a few years before the disaster.

The mine, re-opened after the accident, continued in existence until 1938 when it went into liquidation.

The present village of Hillcrest is slowly fading into history, just as its great mine disaster did.

Half the dozen or so stores are boarded up, including the biggest building—the Hillcrest Hotel.

Some of the homes are abandoned. Some seem in desperate need of improvement, a few are well-painted and attractive.

The village is still home for a few miners working in nearby Coleman.

And social activity still centres on the Hillcrest Miners Literary and Athletic Club, rebuilt after a fire in 1939.

If any of the villagers remember the explosion they don't appear anxious to recall it. Those born after 1914 express little interest.

"It was 50 years ago," said one man, emphasizing 50. Anyone seeking a little bit of history won't find it easily.

The cemetery is the easiest place—it lies on a little hill just outside Hillcrest and off the road that winds across a small valley.

The common burial plot for nearly all the victims lies towards the far end. There are a few grave markers but most of the dead are represented by metal tags identifying them on a common tombstone.

Two roads lead to the mine but only one is accessible and not by car. In fact, a barbed wire gate must be scaled to get through it by foot.

It consists of three concrete buildings, cracked and falling apart, all without roofs.

The two entrances to the mine are no longer visible although railway ties embedded in coal slag point the way.

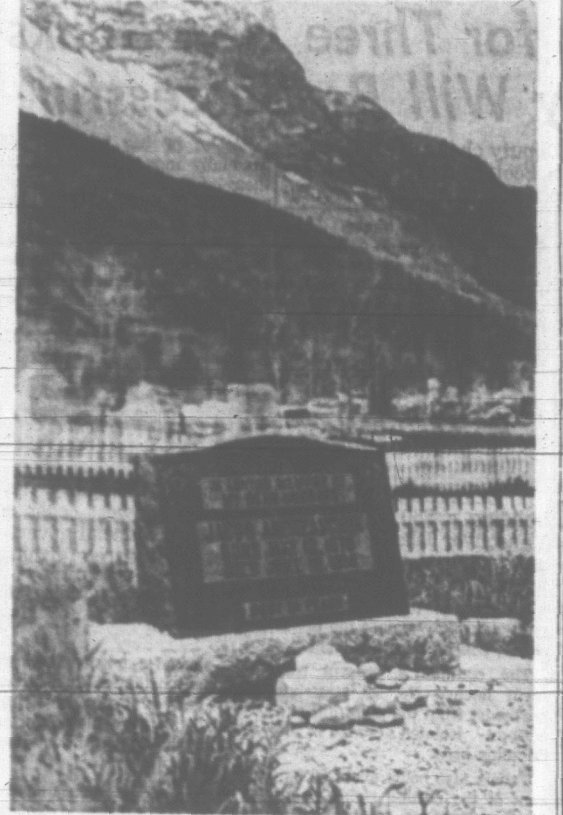

A grisly find are numerous cleated miners' boots and gloves and animal bones.

Relics of the great explosion? Villagers said no, just garbage dumped there in later years, and bones of stray animals—not horses that once worked the mine.

The surroundings are also littered with old boilers, great springs, bits of shovels and endless coils of wire rope. Big timbers fallen to the ground apparently mark the entrance to the No. 2 mine.

The entire scene is peaceful, save only the sound of a falling stream, a standing memorial to 193 men and their mine—forgotten in a hill behind Hillcrest.

Russians Open Arctic Border

As a result of talks between Finland, Norway and the U.S.S.R., the Soviet Union has just agreed to open its Arctic border for tourism near Kirkenes, Norway. It was also announced that the Russian consulate in Kirkenes will be able to arrange visas within a few hours for visitors who will be joining special tours.

Short tours in the Arctic, to Murmansk and to Leningrad will be offered by Scandinavian Airlines System, originating in Kirkenes. One tour will go by bus from Kirkenes to the Russian mining town of Nikel (population 25,000).

After a short stop it will continue to Murmansk, the Russian Arctic seaport with a population of over a quarter of a million.

After two days of sightseeing, including a night at the theatre, the Arctic museum, a fur farm and the pioneer palace, the tour will continue by train to Leningrad for sightseeing in Russia's second largest city.

The other tour will be from Kirkenes by bus for a one-day visit to the Russian town of Boris Gleb. There visitors will see the new power station, an old church and an English-language film about the area. They will also have an opportunity to see and participate in Arctic fishing.

In other SAS news, four ultra long-range DC-8 jet transports have been ordered from Douglas Aircraft Corporation.

The order will result in some 7 million man hours of work in about 2,500 firms across the U.S. The new jets will be delivered to SAS in early 1967.

The $35 million contract was signed at SAS headquarters in Stockholm by Karl Nilsson, president of the airline, and Jackson R. McGowan, vice-president of Douglas.

Barkerville Ready For a Record Year

Provincial Secretary W. D. Black will officially open 10 weeks of scheduled entertainment at historic Barkerville June 29 at 8 p.m.

Deputy provincial secretary, L. J. Wallace, who also is chairman of the Barkerville Advisory Committee, today announced that the 1965 premiere of Theatre Royal will take place the same evening.

Barkerville, the authentically recreated gold-rush town located in the Cariboo, 60 miles East of Quesnel, is now in its fourth season as a prime B.C. tourist attraction.

Recreated from a ghost town by the provincial government, the attractions are being added to every year. Hotels, bars, miner's shacks, tradesmen's and craftsmen's shops and ancient offices all have been rebuilt to appear as they did more than 100 years ago.

Mr. Wallace said that 140,000 visitors were registered last summer and the figure is likely to be surpassed in 1965.

Besides the static attractions there will again be authentic stage coach rides, "dude" gold

Argentina, Brazil, Bolivia, Uruguay and Paraguay have created the "American railway pass" or "Amerail pass" as first step toward integration of their railroads. Peru, Ecuador, Mexico and other countries in the hemisphere are expected to join.

Crossroads of Many Races, Brno a Showplace of History

Although most western tourists head for Prague when they visit Czechoslovakia, there are many regions of this central European nation that hold interest for today's traveller. Not the least of these is Southern Moravia, the capital of which is Brno, the country's largest city after Prague.

Southern Moravia, with its plains, hills, rivers and forests, and with its fortresses and castles, is a region with a rich past. Excavations have revealed that settlements existed there as far back as 30,000 years ago and were inhabited by mammoth hunters.

Later in its history, Southern Moravia became the crossroads of many races and during the days of the Caesars was penetrated by the legions of Rome. Burial ground mounds indicate that Slavs have lived there since the third century A.D.

The land of this area was devastated during the Thirty Years War, the Turkish invasions and the Napoleonic wars. The region, in fact, was twice invaded by the French and it was at Slavkov (Austerlitz) a short distance east of Brno that the famous Battle of the Three Emperors was fought.

Brno, the site of the international trade fairs which are held annually in September (this year's will be the seventh annual fair), is an architectural delight both for its many interesting edifices and for the very marked contrast between old and new buildings.

Among the particularly distinctive features of the city are the two slender Gothic spires of the dome of St. Peter and the brooding outline of Spilberk Castle which brings to mind the Dark Ages when the castle casemates served as a prison.

Among the city's other inter-

Zaniest Boats Set For Annual Parade

The annual Character Boat Parade will be held this summer on Aug. 28 in Newport Harbor, Calif., a procession of probably the zaniest craft ever to sail the sea.

In the first place, Newport, itself, is unusual. The landlocked bay is studded with seven islands covered with the homes of nautical-minded residents. A housewife going shopping stands on her pier and waves in the water taxi.

Character Boats are or were unique to this harbor, Newport believes. And just what is a Character Boat? The best answer is to describe a few that can be seen in the moorings and anchorages any day of the year:

St. Poopalong, Edgar Bergen, owner. A Monterey double-ended, purple cabin, ivy twining up the antenna. Ancient steam engine with billowing black smoke and a shrieking whistle.

Kobehenaven Music man. A David Rose, owner. Open launch with a fringed surry up, steam engine and flaked smokestack. Skipper always wears a Confederate hat.

Status Seeker. South Seas trading ship complete with hula girls.

U.S. BUSINESS

Heated Row Over Economy Marked Week

NEW YORK (AP)—The argument about what's ahead for the U.S. economy grew more heated this week.

President Johnson attempted to reassure the public that all is well now and that the outlook is good. He conceded there are some problems.

The stock market was buffeted by the debate and suffered its worst loss on Tuesday since the assassination of President Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963. It also was battered Wednesday by a false rumor that President Johnson had suffered a heart attack.

The dispute over the economic future stemmed from a statement last week by William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. He said he saw "disquieting similarities" between the current business situation and the boom preceding the 1929 crash.

Leon H. Keyserling, former chairman of the council of economic advisers, charged that Martin "misled" the public in drawing a parallel between the current economic situation and the one that resulted in the depression.

TOLD TO RESIGN

Representative Wright Patman, Dem. Tex., chairman of the house banking committee, urged that Martin resign.

After meeting with Martin and other advisers on economics and finance Thursday, President Johnson said he saw "no reason for gloom or doom" at this time.

He predicted "solid but moderate gains" for the economy during the rest of this year.

Apparently in an effort to erase speculation that he was unhappy about Martin's speech, Johnson told reporters there are "no cross-currents, divisions or conflicts" within the administration.

From another quarter came an optimistic appraisal of the outlook of the automobile industry.

Donald Frey, vice-president of Ford Motor Co., said car sales are running at a rate of 8,800,000 a year and this pace is likely to be sustainable. In 1964, a record of 7,600,000 U.S.-made cars were sold.

The government reported that in the first quarter of this year manufacturing firms rolled up a 22 per cent profit gain on a 10 per cent rise in sales.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Bargain Hunters On the Go

By JOHN BELANGER

Canadian Press Staff Writer Bargain hunters took advantage of lower stock prices late this week and helped bring industrial values up in light-stock exchange trading.

However, prices were off sharply on the week.

The rebound followed almost two weeks of sharply lower prices on Canadian stock exchanges. And stock markets had been soft for the two weeks prior to the slide.

Prices began to level out, then dipped, just after the 87-stock industrial index of the Toronto Stock Exchange hit a 1965 low of 178.32 May 14.

Prices also fell on the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges. Trading was light to moderate and speculative action on the TSE, MSE and CSE was at a minimum.

GAINS LOST

The lower move, which wiped out gains made thus far in 1965, was a continuation of the previous week's trend. The industrial index at Toronto hit a 1965 low of 165.48 Wednesday. Slight advances were made Thursday and better jumps Friday.

The index closed Friday at 168.24, down 2.26 from the previous week.

The decline this week was shared through all major sections of the market. Banks, oils, steels, foods and metal-working issues bore the brunt of the drop.

Actively-traded issues included CPR, Stelco, Consumers' Gas, Cominco, Massey-Ferguson, Aluminum and Interprovincial Steel and Pipe.

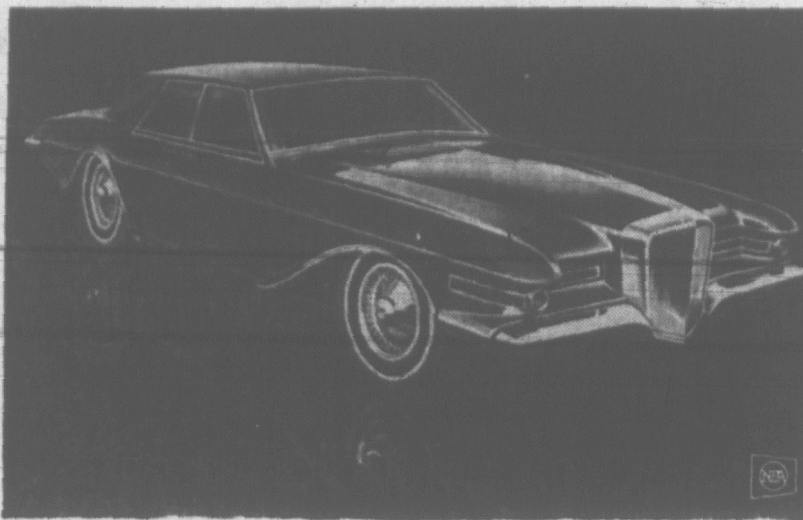

Ray Nese, a securities analyst with A. E. Osler and Co., stockbrokers, said in discussing the market situation, "it appears the worst is over for the time being."

Store Sales Show Drop

TORONTO (CP)—Department store sales in the week ended May 29 were 9.9 per cent below those in the same week last year, the bureau of statistics reported Friday. With the exception of Saskatchewan, with a rise of 21.6 per cent, all other provinces posted decreases.

Applicants for Three New Banks 'Eventually Will Be Successful'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Deputy chairman J. Douglas Gibson of the Bank of Nova Scotia said Friday efforts of proposed new banks to obtain charters will eventually be successful.

"If they meet the requirements, more power to them," he said in an interview. "We want a competitive system so why should we want to keep them out?"

He predicted that politicians now opposing applications for charters will ultimately have to give in.

Currently seeking charters are the Laurentide Bank, Vancouver; the Bank of British Columbia, Vancouver; and the Bank of Western Canada, Winnipeg. All three charter applications have been stalled in parliament.

Mr. Gibson was critical of Finance Minister Gordon's proposal of restricting to 25 per cent non-resident ownership of Canadian bank stock.

"We shouldn't pass legislation discriminating against foreign-ers or foreign banks. They should be allowed to open agencies here just as we are allowed to in other countries."

He also predicted greater decentralization of business firms.

New Challenge Faces People of Albernis

By JIM HUME
Times Business Editor

Up in the Alberni Valley the people have never been noted for their shyness. Neither have they ever been noted for failing to look the facts in the eye.

Lightening their belts and getting on with a job that must be done. Last year when the giant tidal wave rolled down the Alberni Canal leaving destruction in its wake, the people of the Alberni showed they had the personal courage to handle disaster.

On June 30 those same people face another challenge. Not as fearsome as a tidal wave it will, nevertheless, have far wider repercussions and will demand just as much courage.

And what will the Alberni—scheduled to amalgamate as one city on Oct. 28, 1967 but already thinking as one community—do with the $2,000,000 if the people give the go-ahead?

They will borrow money as they need it for a range of projects calculated to spruce up both communities from end to end.

High on the priority list is a flood control program which will see River Road rebuilt several feet above seasonal flood level.

Johnson Road, the main entrance to Alberni, will be widened and improved.

A new link between the two cities joining 10th Avenue and Tebo.

A sewage treatment plant to keep stride with a growing population.

A joint work-yard. A new police station which will also house Civil Defence offices. A new fire hall in Port Alberni.

DUTIES DRAW PROTESTS

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Imports of textiles from mainland China are being discriminated against by the Canadian government, a Montreal importer said Friday.

This is because they are being valued for duty on the basis of Japanese textiles, said textile buyer M. J. Solloway.

The question was raised recently in the Commons by Alison Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle). He suggested that Canada was being unfair to the Chinese because it was comparing Chinese worsted suitings with Japanese suitings which were of superior quality.

Mr. Hamilton urged Hon. E. J. Benson, minister of national revenue, to consider the possibility of appraising or valuing such goods from mainland China on the basis of Hong Kong goods.

Mr. Benson said Friday that his department in making its appraisals has given recognition to the claims of the Chinese that their goods should be priced at a lower level than the Japanese goods, because of the variation in quality.

Mr. Solloway of the firm of Solloway and Polioff Limited in Montreal, when interviewed Friday supported Mr. Hamilton's position. He said that in his view the Canadian government was not dealing fairly with the Chinese and this was bound to arouse resentment when it was realized that the Chinese are large scale buyers of Canadian wheat.

DUMPING DUTY

He said the government had imposed a dumping duty on Chinese textiles around April 14 which had raised the prices for the Chinese textiles sold in this country.

Mr. Solloway said the Chinese Textile and Export Corporation was "very upset" by the action of the Canadian government. The Chinese were puzzled over the fact that they were good customers of the Canadian farmer buying his wheat.

But when they shipped their worsted suitings into this country, which could be made into suits of medium quality, the government insisted of imposing a value for duty that pushed up the price.

This meant in effect that the Canadian who would have been able to get a good low-priced suit made out of Chinese worsted was having to pay a higher price, Mr. Solloway said. He and his firm were having difficulty explaining the actions of the Canadian government to the Chinese.

3 Companies Seek Pulpwood In Kootenays

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three East Kootenay firms have notified the provincial government they each wish to proceed with construction of pulp mills in the region and now face the prospect of bidding against each other for the required timber.

The firms were previously told by Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston that there was only enough timber in the region for one economic pulp mill of about 500 tons a day or two of 350-ton capacity. He proposed to auction the timber to the highest bidder.

The three firms—Canal Development Ltd., a subsidiary of Crestbrook Timber Company Ltd., of Cranbrook; Crownwest Pass Coal Company Ltd., of Fernie; and Kicking Horse Forest Products Ltd., of Golden, were given until Friday to decide if they wished to proceed with the auction.

The three firms' applications for pulp harvesting agreements overlapped each other in varying degrees in the region.

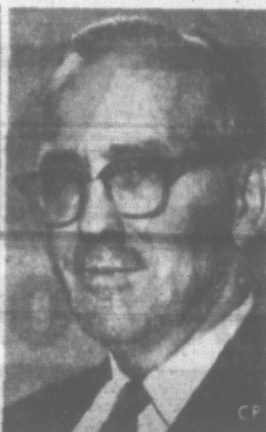

In his ruling on the applications May 3 the minister said he proposed to sell an option to purchase the pulpwood timber by public auction on the basis of a bonus bid over and above the usual stumpage rates. Stumpage rates are set for each purchase of timber by the B.C. Forest Service.

SINGLE MEETING

The minister has yet to spell out the specifics of the auction but officials of the companies said they believe he had in mind a single meeting at which they would compete, rather than bidding by sealed tender.

Crows Nest, at the public hearings in January, said it planned a $46,000,000, 500-ton-a-day mill at Morrissey, eight miles from Fernie. Kicking Horse has not specifically announced what size of plant it has in mind but Canal Development announced its intention of building a 250-ton-a-day mill at Canal Flats, whether it wins the government timber or not.

The mill would be supplied from waste and chips from Crestbrook's sawmill operations in the area.

SPECIAL study assignment for the University of Alberta will be undertaken by Dr. Andrew Stewart when his term as chairman of the board of broadcast governors expires this fall, it was revealed in Ottawa Friday. He will conduct a survey on higher education in the prairie province.

PURE PORK ROAD HOG FRANTIC ON FREEWAY

VANCOUVER (CP)—A 50-pound pig had RCMP officers, a bridge patrolman and civilians huffing and puffing in hot pursuit as it dodged in and out of rush-hour traffic on the Port Mann Freeway Friday.

An escapee from the provincial government's nearby Colony Farm, the pig held up eastbound and westbound motorists for 20 minutes before being recaptured.

'I SURRENDER'

Fugitive Ends U.S. Manhunt

KANSAS CITY (AP)—"I'm tired of running. I want to surrender."

Duane Pope, 22 and fresh out of college, said it twice Friday—first to the president of his college and then in a telephone call to police. By surrendering, Pope ended a U.S.-wide search that began a week earlier when the president and two employees of a Big Springs, Neb., bank were shot to death after a holdup.

The FBI took charge of Pope shortly after his surrender here and within 90 minutes had him arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Lee Cisel. He was held in jail in lieu of $100,000 bail.

The FBI would not comment on what, if anything, Pope said about the June 4 robbery of the Farmers State Bank of Big Springs when $1,598 was taken.

Pope called Dr. D. W. Bittiger, the president of McPherson, Kan., College shortly after checking in at a hotel in downtown Kansas City. He said he had heard Dr. Bittiger's appeal that he surrender.

"He asked me what he could do and I told him to surrender," said Bittiger.

A few minutes later, police dispatcher Cpl. Vernon Scoville received this call: "I want to give myself up. I understand I'm wanted for robbery in Big Springs, Neb."

The Big Springs bank was robbed around the noon by a lone bandit. Shot dead as they lay on the floor at the robber's command were Andreas Kjeldgaard, 77, the president; Glenn Hendrickson, 59, the cashier; and Mrs. Lois Ann Hothan, 35, a bookkeeper. Franklin Kjeldgaard, 25, assistant cashier and Andreas' nephew, also was shot twice but he survived.

Fishing Zone Negotiations 'Difficult'

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin said in the Commons today negotiations begun a year ago to expand Canada's exclusive fishing zones continue to be "very difficult."

He said the United States and several European countries involved in the talks are concerned about the effects of Canada's announced intention to use the straight baseline system in applying the 12-mile fishing limit. This concern was not limited to fisheries aspects.

Washington reports have indicated that the U.S. government is fearful that Canadian baseline zones would be used as a pretext by China and other Communist countries to restrict the operations of the U.S. Navy in the Gulf of Tonkin and other strategic bays.

Mr. Martin said he is still hopeful negotiations will be concluded successfully.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) noted that a year has passed since Parliament passed legislation authorizing the cabinet to draw up the 12-mile baseline zones, which would close Queen Charlotte Sound, the Gulf of St. Lawrence and other bays to foreign fishermen.

29 Freight Cars Pile Up on CPR

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP)—Twenty-nine box cars wound up along the banks of the Kootenay River and two 100-yard sections of track were torn up Thursday when a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train left the rails 26 miles southwest of this southwestern B.C. town. No injuries were reported.

QUEBEC, B.C. SIMILAR, BUT ...

Moulding Own Destinies

By AB-KENT

Quebec is like no other Canadian province except British Columbia.

Even then, the two provinces are poles apart geographically and politically, the cultures are different, and outside the urban centres the people live differently.

Yet, there is a similarity of purpose and other likenesses evident in Quebec and B.C. today.

There is optimism, confidence for the future, a renaissance spirit anxious to take part in the new prosperity.

It could be felt by B.C. visitors to Quebec and Mont-Times City Hall reporter Ab-Kent continues his report on the Union of B.C. Municipalities' goodwill visit to Quebec in this, the third of four articles.

real areas who took part in a recent exchange for mutual understanding.

B.C., of course, has a nationalism like no other western Canadian province, although Quebec nationalism beats anything the rest of Canada can muster.

But the people of Quebec think this is good, that a province should develop its inherent culture and feelings of nationalism, in their case transplanted from France.

This strengthens a country from within, they believe, helping it endure the stresses from without.

Same Mould

In English-speaking Canada the trend is to cast everyone from the same mould, to deny the development of individuality.

Among many British Columbians there is a clinging to a British bias, more noticeable than in other parts of the country. This, Quebecers feel, is to the advantage of all Canada, lending identity to its people.

Both B.C. and Quebec are often misunderstood in Ottawa, even though the federal government and the other eight provinces appear to have no trouble communicating.

Feeling Of Isolation

There is a feeling of isolation or separation from the rest of the country, especially in non-metropolitan areas.

This may be due to different reasons—in Quebec because of cultural and language barriers, in B.C. because of physical walls of mountains and distance now being pierced by jet travel.

(Salisbury, de Valleyfield Mayor Robert Cauchon recognized this feeling, and when he visited Victoria Mayor R. B. Wilson last summer, the idea of an exchange visit of Quebec municipal leaders took rapid form.)

Go It Alone

The two provinces have a tendency to go it alone when Ottawa shows indifference, or on the other hand to shun federal participation. For example: B.C.'s bank, its claim on offshore mineral rights, direct trade negotiations with Japan; Quebec's educational individuality, direct cultural negotiations with France, separate income tax agreements.

Both provinces have nationalized hydro-electric resources and are competing for vast new industrial development with offers of cheap power and virtually unlimited primary resources. Quebec goes further and offers financial aid as well.

The premiers of both provinces—Jean Lesage of Quebec and W. A. C. Bennett—are men of strong individuality who like to get their own way. They have been described as clever political opportunists and manipulators.

'Prime Minister'

Both like to be referred to as "Prime Minister." They want their provinces to have greater economic independence, more control over fiscal policy, and to mould their own destinies.

Yet both declare their loyalty to the Crown and a desire for a united Canada.

French Quebec wants a Canada whose separate parts are joined by mutual respect for the aspirations of all. Riviere-du-Loup Mayor Rosaire Gendron, president of the Union of Quebec Municipalities, voiced this hope.

He said the country's immense potential is demonstrated by its seaboard metropoli-

Vancouver and Montreal "at a time when its growing pains do not frighten either of us."

Survival

But according to an outside view of Canada, by an American business weekly, the country's political survival is as much at stake today as in 1867. If we do come through we will probably have a weaker federal government, it says.

The provincial premiers have the most power today, riding a wave of prosperity likely to last, the magazine says.

Good times give more weight to the two traditional threats to a Canadian nation—the pull from the south and a weak sense of nationalism.

Both points were made strongly by Quebec Culture Minister Pierre Laporte when speaking to the B.C. mission last month.

Canadian historian Edgar McInnis calls Canada a study in political survival, almost a classic case.

But a reason for nearly a century of existence may be due to strong federal government, as intended by the framers of the British North America Act.

Time has chipped Ottawa's powers away in favor of the provinces, with the erosion at its strongest today.

A vital question is whether the constitution should extend provincial power, thus detracting even more from the concept of Canada as one nation. The fact of central government is one of the few truly national characteristics of the country. Quebec, too, must realize this. But one day she may arise from a long repose, determined to seize her birthright.

Hammer Nails Man

By GERALD McNEIL
QUEBEC (CP)—At one time
the classical carpentry accident was striking your thumb with the hammer.

Now, things are come complicated . . . you get shot.

The reason is that a foot-long hammer, called the ram-set fastener is being used more and more on construction jobs.

Using a .22-calibre charge, it can drive nails through wood into steel or concrete.

Jacques Delage, of the Quebec Workmen's Compensation Board, describes it as a valuable tool but one so dangerous that only experienced men should use it.

Case histories being gathered by Dr. Joffre-Albert Gravel, a Quebec City surgeon, confirms his opinion.

Dr. Gravel went to a building site to see the ramset demonstrated.

The worker carrying out the demonstration almost drove a three-inch nail, travelling at the speed of a bullet, through his own foot.

One ramset accident here must rank among the most bizarre in construction history.

A 31-year-old accountant was working late, alone in his downtown office, his back to the wall and eyes intent on his figures, when he was struck so hard he slumped forward.

DEVELOPED NEUROSIS

He reached back to find a nail sticking from his head.
There was no blood, little pain, and he was conscious, though the nail had penetrated the skull and entered the brain.

He had no idea what had happened. He called his wife:
"There's a nail in my head.
Help me."

His wife rushed him to a hospital emergency ward where the nail was removed by Dr. Maurice Heon, a neurologist.

No brain damage had been done, as the nail furrowed through rather than tore brain tissue.

"The wound healed well," says Dr. Gravel in the paper he and Dr. Heon are preparing on the subject.

"But the patient, profoundly scared by this unusual incident, developed a neurosis and ended up consulting a psychiatrist."

Investigation showed that a worker in an attached building was using a ramset to nail wood studs to a brick wall.
The carpenter didn't know one section was made of wood and plaster, and this was the section directly behind the office worker.

TWO SAFETY FEATURES

The gun has two safety features.

One is the plug near the head of the nail to slow it down.

The other is a flat plate on the end of the ramset's barrel.

It must be applied to a level surface before the gun will fire.

"The one dangerous factor is that no matter how thin the surface against which the plate is applied, if it is level, the gun will fire," Dr. Gravel says.

"Experts have assured me that if the fastener is shot through a very thin board, it will behave very much like a free bullet . . .

"This is a dangerous, very useful instrument that should not be left in the hands of the uninitiated."

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Lawns should be thoroughly watered frequently enough to prevent browning. Frequency depends on type of soil, age of lawn and exposure to sun and wind.

Propagate choice varieties and colors of subspina by taking cuttings; also alyssum, arabis, rockery geraniums and phlox.

Doronicum (the yellow Flea-bane) flower stems should be cut down and a mulch of old manure or compost given.

Propagate perennial fibers (candytuft) by cuttings.
Daffodils and all the narcissus bulbs may be dug now for summer storage as leaves

BEASTALL ADVISES

Prickly Problems Posed ... It's Berry Time Again

The cane fruits (raspberry) and bramble fruits (logans, Pascifics, blackberry, etc.) are now producing masses of new growths from soil level.

These growths are the ones that will carry fruits next year, and the amount they bear will reflect this year's care.

The more growths the root has to support the poorer the individual growths will be, and since all unneeded canes are removed later in the season it seems a useless waste of plant energy to permit their development.

From the gardener's angle, the less growths there are, the easier it is to cultivate and pick the fruit, to say nothing of better quality fruits due to air circulation and sun penetration.

No more than two to three growths should be permitted to develop on plants set out this spring, four to six growths on last year's set-outs, and six to eight on established plantings over two years old.

Even these figures are arbitrary, since the number of growths any plant can develop thriftily depends on the vigor of the plant itself.

Vigor, in turn, depends on variety, soil conditions, weather, pests and diseases, and the gardener tending the plants has to decide what should be the maximum load.

On each plant, select the strongest new growths to retain for next year's fruiting, and remove at soil level, or a little below, all others that are showing.

CHECK PLANTS

As the season progresses, check the plants at least once a week, removing additional growths as they appear.

Should there be an insufficient number of growths on any plant, additional ones may be selected from later shoots, but these are never as strong as the first.

Also, a shortage of new growths often indicates a weak root system that will do better if not overloaded.

Sometimes a selected growth becomes damaged during cultivation or picking.

On strong plants two extra growths are selected to cover such losses, but can be removed at the end of the season if all survive.

Strong raspberries will carry six to eight canes each season.

Logans and related brambles — including blackberries — will usually provide sufficient fruit on four to six canes, according to the space available.

LOTS OF MOISTURE

All these plants require plenty of moisture at their roots when the fruit is forming and during the development of the berries.

Lack of water over this period results in small fruits with hard seeds, unacceptable for eating either raw or preserved.

Cultivation around rasper-ries should consist only of removing weeds, and this is best done by hand since the roots are right at the surface of the soil.

Deeper cultivation can be practical between the plants and between rows if a good spacing was allowed at planting time.

Removing tips of raspberry canes at a convenient height, say five feet, is claimed by some to increase the number of fruit laterals to a cane, while others disagree with this theory.

Loganberries make an excellent berry for home garden growing.

They are rarely seen in markets because of poor shipping qualities when fully ripe and rapid loss of eye appeal.

Boysenberries, with me at least, are shy producers, and while their fruit is excellent, the plants fail to pay their rent.

Young berries fail to thrive in my clay, but Marion blackberries and thornless logans are now on trial.

Garden Swim Pool Real Cool

By PAULINE GRAVES

What makes one garden really outstanding, a joy to be in, and another one merely pleasant, even though both have trees and flowers?

The answer lies in the planning.

Shown here is a garden based on a series of rectangles.

Largest rectangle is the swimming pool which dominates the yard, and its shape is echoed in the tree wells placed at intervals around the yard.

Colorful flowers fill the tree wells to soften the rigidity of the masonry used so extensively, and they are protected from the swimming pool water by two courses of bricks.

A low, narrow planter, its height also two courses of bricks, cuts through the yard for a strip of additional softness and color.

The deck around the pool is concrete, and the rest of the yard is exposed aggregate in 3'x4' rectangles bordered with three-inch redwood headers.

So much masonry is good for ease of maintenance, but it becomes stark and bare without greenery and flowers.

Although a swimming pool adds to the enjoyment of summer living, it is not a requisite for an attractive yard.

If you feel the need of water in your garden for a visual cooling effect, small reflecting pools, just a few inches deep, can serve the purpose.

Larger pools need a circulating pump to keep the water sweet and fresh, but small pools can be filled with the garden hose and hosed out for cleaning.

FOREST
CEAR SIDING

What Is "FOREST" Siding?

An attractive type of siding that comes from specially selected Cedar logs sawn to bring out all the distinctive character of knots, burls and grain.

How to finish "FOREST"

"Forest" has a distinctive horizontal shadow line that will enhance the beauty of your home. Stain adds a lasting attractive finish.
Some of the most popular colors in stain are Cedar, Mahogany, Flamingo or Sage. "Forest" Siding also takes Paint beautifully if you wish a solid color finish.

YOU can easily apply
"FOREST" cedar siding.
Many homeowners have applied this modern, beautiful "FOREST" siding themselves without the slightest difficulty.

Q. What keeps all flowers, shrubs and plants Bug-Free?

A. New GREEN CROSS General Purpose Flower & Ornamental Spray

It works in two ways because it is both a SYSTEMIC and a RESIDUAL insecticide. Result: widest possible control of sucking and chewing insects and mites. We especially recommend it as an early season spray for evergreens and for all-season insect control on shrubs and flowering plants.
It even protects new growth which appears after spraying.
Bonus: it's completely free of any objectionable odour.
For rose lovers, we advise regular use of GARDAL ROSE SPRAY with SYSTEMIC action. It controls insects and diseases which attack roses in particular.
Remember: SYSTEMICS ARE NOT WASHED OFF
BY RAIN SINCE THEY ARE ACTUALLY WITHIN THE PLANT. They penetrate right into the sap stream and kill insects which suck the plant juices.

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

Mail is like a good book or a flagon of Scotland's best or the windows in a packing house. They all ought to be opened once in a while whether they need it or not.

This week the postie dropped off, among others, a missive reflecting the sharp, lively quill of a reader.

John Bateson, Shepherd Rd., R.R. 1, Cobble Hill, couldn't compress his message into a few paragraphs so he did the next best thing. He wrote a small novel.

Bateson bristled over some statements in a column here dealing with the travails of Victoria horseman Evan Williams. Williams' thoroughbreds had been shoved into the Cattle Barns adjacent to Vancouver's Exhibition Park.

Williams contended that there was nothing wrong with the Cattle Palace except that it plays host to construction jackhammers, bawling auctioneers and small children with lusty lungs. He was not enchanted either with the concrete floor his stock had to stand on, claiming it was conducive to sore legs, ingrown toenails and flat feet.

Keep Your Foot Out of Your Mouth

What really curdled Mr. Bateson's soup was an indelicate reference to Emily Post, a grey mare once in Williams' employ. But let author Bateson have the podium:

"I am at a loss to understand why you should suggest that the grey mare's heart is 'as big as your little toenail'—unless it is because you are directing your comments at someone who has exceptionally big feet to place in an exceptionally big mouth . . .

"Emily Post, by Corbett II out of Rude Miss, was, maybe, a difficult horse for a beginner to train. I think . . . Mr. Williams was a beginner when he claimed her.

"Nonetheless, she won two races for him despite his reported intention to use her for breeding. She was a mare who earned her keep. I only hope for his sake that Mr. Williams' more recent purchases (who did well in a bad two-year-old year) earn as much for his stable.

"Rude Miss, her dam, is the property of my wife and myself. We followed Emily Post's career as closely as we are following the careers of her half-sister, Crankie Maggie by Dark Hawk (a winner this year) and Torrey, by Syriax (one of the best bred stallions in Canada)."

Like Poets, He Has Girth Trouble

Columnists, sir, have feet as large as overgrown elephants. But they rarely stick them in their mouths. Too busy stuffing food in. Owner Williams never posed as a trainer, leaving the task to Norman Leaver and more recently Barry MacGillivray. But Williams does climb aboard his stock occasionally, a la Paul Revere. He would probably ride her in the afternoons, too, but like overstuffed poets he has trouble getting inside his girth.

The B.C. Thoroughbred, 1964 edition, reports that Emily won two races and $2,685 in purse monies in 12 starts. Mr. Williams' point (and mine) is not that she lacked haste but fortitude. When other noble beasts looked her in the eye, Emily exhibited a tendency to get extremely disinterested in the chase.

Back to Mr. Bateson . . .

"I would be interested to hear exactly what it is that concrete is supposed to do to a horse's legs. This paupering of thoroughbreds—either standing on boards or peat, and then only setting foot outside on soft ground—is a fallacy which accounts for so many bad-legged horses.

"I whipped into a pack of hounds for a number of years in England. I could not afford transportation as well as hunting foxes, but I thought nothing of riding 10 to 15 miles and back on hard road after a full day across bad country. Our hunters ALWAYS had concrete floors as do a multitude of flat-races and chasers over there . . .

"I am willing to bet that if Mr. Williams exercised up and down Mt. Douglas for six weeks prior to galloping his horses at the start of the season he would not find himself crawling under horses' bellies, wondering which leg was going to go next . . ."

Who Would Carry Whom Downhill?

No viewpoint is offered on legs, since the ones studied closely at racetracks belong to two-legged fillets. But it is true that a spell of standing on concrete has bowed this operator's stems and so upset him he bet on horses which weren't feeling very jazzy either.

North American horsemen tend to pamper their pets, but ascending Mt. Douglas might be cutting it a little thick. Having in mind the soft, early upbringing of today's horses, Williams might very well have to pack his mount back down.

Mr. Bateson was not all bloodthirsty syntax with razor blades for a chaser. Near the end of his gospel he even mellowed a little . . .

"If you're ever up this way, our place might interest you. I understand it was once the home of (the late) Mrs. Jessie Mackenzie. One of her horses, Killarney Belle, was buried in the woods below our home.

"We only have two mares so far—Rude Miss, who slipped twins to Syriax in November, and Petite Femme, who has a grand colt foal by Aga's Allright—but we do serve a good cup of tea.

Shovelling Comes Quite Naturally

"Even though we never intended it that way, it looks as if this will turn into a thoroughbred breeding establishment. We were thinking of naming it after one of Mrs. Mackenzie's better known horses since she was a much-loved and respected person in B.C. racing circles.

"Any suggestions?"

Your invitation is appreciated, sir. And you could do no better than name your establishment after one of Mrs. Mac's horses. Racing and society lost a stakes winner when she died. Of all her horses, Jimmy Rogan was her favorite. He had heart, courage and competitive spirit. How about Rogan's Roost?

Chances are this turf addict will drop in to see your stock and swap lies. He is easily recognizable, a little thin in the withers and about 15 hands—wide.

Might just pick up a shovel and throw a little fertilizer about. There are some people who claim he excels at moving the stuff, three times a week . . .

Two Days to Register For Junior Net Clinic

Pistol Shoot Slated Sunday

Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association will host the third pistol tournament of the Vancouver Island Shooting League season Sunday at the Victoria City Police range on Highland Road.

Firing in the registered Shooting Federation of Canada event will begin at 10:30 a.m.

Opposing the sharp host club in centrefire and rimfire events will be trigger experts from the Navy, Victoria police, Nanaimo, Duncan and Salt Spring.

Only two more days remain in which Victoria youngsters can sign up for the first junior tennis clinic staged by the city parks department and B.C. Lawn Tennis Association.

Deadline for registering at the city hall parks office is 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. Registration fee is $1 for the six-week course at the new Beacon Hill courts. Lessons start on June 28.

Applicants must be between 10 and 16 years, as of June 1, and must be residents of the city. Officials hope to include ill-Greater Victoria youngsters in future years.

More than 325 children had signed up by Friday night and officials expect about 350 to attend the clinic.

Don, Juan, Sandy Murder for Mets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
It's a rough week for any ball club when it has to face Juan Marichal, Don Drysdale and Sandy Koufax on successive days. But for New York Mets it's murder.

The three National League aces have a combined record of 38 victories against one defeat against the chronic last-placers and it's growing all the time. Marichal blanked Casey Stengel's stalwarts for San Francisco Giants Thursday night to run his personal record against them to 12-0. Then Los Angeles Dodgers came to town and Drysdale hit his third home run of the year in the eighth inning to edge Warren Spahn 2-1.

Today the tall right hander, who has 16 victories in 17 decisions against New York, gave way to Koufax, the league strikeout king, who was bidding to improve his 10-0 record at the Mets' expense.

Elsewhere in the NL, Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed San Francisco 5-3, Milwaukee Braves walloped St. Louis Cardinals 8-2, Cincinnati Reds edged Chicago Cubs 4-3 and Philadelphia Phillies nipped Houston Astros 6-5 in 10 innings.

ROSEBORO HITS HOMER
Drysdale retired the first 12 Mets he faced. Then Johnny Lewis opened the fifth inning with a single and eventually scored on Joe Christopher's single. John Roseboro homered in the fifth off Spahn, who now is 4-7.

The Pirates won their seventh straight game and 19th of 21, scoring three runs in the first inning on Willie Stargell's two-run triple and Don Candenon's sacrifice fly and two in the second on Jim Pagnaroni's homer. The Giants' Willie Mays clouted his 19th homer, a three-run hit, in the third.

Felipe Alou snapped a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer in the Milwaukee seventh, and the Braves went on to win their eighth game in the last 10.

The Reds edged the Cubs on Gordon Coleman's two-run homer in the ninth inning. Coleman also doubled across a run in the first.

Johnny Callison lashed an inside-the-park home run in the 10th-inning for the Philadelphia victory.

YANKEES CLIMBING
New York Yankees, beginning to look a little more like American League champions, are higher in the standings today than they have been for the last four weeks.

Bogged down in the second division since April, they continued their most sustained drive of the season Friday night as Al Downing staggered to a 13-hit, 6-4 victory over Los Angeles Angels.

The win was the sixth in the last seven games for the Yankees, hopped them over Boston Red Sox into seventh place for the first time since May 15 and left them only half a game behind the sixth-place Angels.

TWINS WIN PAIR
At the top of the league, meanwhile, first-place Minnesota Twins and runner-up Chicago White Sox remained a 1½ lengths apart, both sweeping two-night doubleheaders.

The Twins edged Detroit Tigers in a pair of extra-inning games, winning both 5-4, the opener in 12 innings and the nightcap in 12 as Jimmie Hall produced the decisive run in each.

Reliever Eddie Fisher played the key role for the White Sox, saying Juan Pizarro's first victory of the season in a 5-2 opening game triumph over Washington Senators, then turning up the winner in a 5-4, 10-inning second-game triumph.

ORISNO HOMERS
Elsewhere, Kansas City Athletics defeated Cleveland Indians 5-2 for Rollie Sheldon's first victory and Baltimore Orioles edged Boston Red Sox 5-4 on John Orsino's two-run homer.

The Yankees, out 13-10, got the job done with a pair of run-scoring doubles by Roger Maris, a third by Doc Edwards and singles by Bobby Richardson and Clete Boyer that drove in runs.

LAWN BOWLING

Tillson Trio Collects Cup

Burnside bowlers stole the show in the women's triples competition for the Simmons Cup, placing two rinks in the final of the annual event at Victoria Lawn Bowling Club.

Mrs. E. Tillson (skip), Mrs. K. Turner and Mrs. L. Johnson picked up the trophy Thursday by defeating Mrs. K. Dickie (skip), Mrs. A. Donald and Mrs. J. McDonald.

In the consolation event, Mrs. M. Henderson skipped a host club trio to win over a Victoria West threesome piloted by Mrs. B. Jenkins.

The Baker Cup will be up for grabs at the Vic West greens in a women's competition June 17 and 21.

In a preliminary round at 2 p.m. next Wednesday, Mrs. F. D. Kettles will play Mrs. D. Green and Mrs. J. Jobson will face Mrs. A. Donald.

Winners will meet in the first round at 10 a.m. Thursday. Other first-round matches are: R. Ayre vs. Findlay, J. McNair vs. E. Tillson, B. Jenkins vs. A. B. Stuart, E. Atkins vs. D. Russell, A. McConnell vs. N. Shearing, K. Dickie vs. J. Turner, W. Bryan vs. V. Wright.

SHORTS FROM THE WORLD OF SPORT

Cyclists Disqualified For Taking Stimulants

Four riders were disqualified today from the 1,400-mile Tour of Britain bicycle race after race authorities claimed they had taken artificial stimulants.

The disqualifications were announced shortly before the start of the 14th and final stage of Britain's top cycle road race, from Morecambe to Blackpool in northwestern England.

Riders banned were Spain's Pedro Santamarina, Salvador Canet and Angel Usamentiaga, and Britain's Ken Hill.

IN TRACK: French runner Michel Jazy bettered his own European record for the 5,000-metre run at Paris Friday night but his effort of 13:29 failed to match the world record time of 13:25 set a week ago by Australian Ron Clarke at Los Angeles.

Jazy beat the world record for the mile Wednesday night at Rennes in 3:53.6. He had lowered the European record for the 5,000 metres to 13:34.4 last Sunday at Lorient.

The temperature was about 66 degrees and Jazy said that this was a few degrees too warm for ideal conditions. It was about 60 degrees when he broke the mile record.

Jazy said that he did not plan any further record attempts at present.

IN HORSE RACING: Go Ahead, a 23-to-1 longshot, won the second race at Monmouth Park at Oceanport, N.J., Friday and completed a $1,148 daily double.

Long Winded took the first race, paying $14.40 to win, and then Go Ahead went ahead and took the second, paying $48.60.

Dartmouth won the $10,485 Harness Track of America Trot for four-year-olds at St. Catharines, Ont., Friday night. Time for the mile was 2:02, bettering the track record.

The race leads to a $50,000 final at Philadelphia.

IN BASEBALL: Gil Hodges, manager of Washington Senators, was felled by a line drive to the side of his head while pitching batting practice before Friday night's doubleheader with Chicago White Sox. Hodges was taken to hospital for observation and the team physician said there was "nothing alarming" about his condition.

New York Mets' catcher Chris Cannizzaro has been suspended for two days by National League president Warren Giles for his run-in with umpire Tom Gorman in a game-Thursday night. He was also fined $50.

IN GENERAL: Sue Maxwell, 23-year-old pro, fired a one-under-par 72 Friday for a 36-hole total of 145 and a two-stroke lead in the women's Western Open golf tournament at Chicago.

Veteran Mariene Hagge pulled into second place at 147 and Sandra Haynie, 22, was third at 149. . . . Jan Wroblewski of Poland today was declared world gliding champ champion as bad weather ruled out flying on the last day of the championship at South Cerney, England.

Rolf Soanig of West Germany was second. . . . Mike Duff of Toronto, had the best time in the 250-centimetre class in practice trials for the international motorcycle races beginning Monday at the Isle of Mann.

Exchange Program With West Indies

OTTAWA (CP) — Judy LaMarsh, minister of national health and welfare, announced here today that her department will sponsor an exchange program between Canada and the West Indies in the field of sports and recreation.

Miss LaMarsh said the program, part of the International Co-operation Year program, will be sponsored through a $21,000 grant to the national council of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Following this tour, a number of West Indian athletes will be invited to attend coach-training clinics in various parts of Canada. Many of the clinics, for leadership training in recreational activities as well as sports, receive assistance under the national fitness and amateur sport program—the source of funds for the YMCA project.

International Co-operation Year is a United Nations program designed to foster closer ties among nations through co-operation in a wide variety of projects.

IN IRISH SWEEP

LONDON (CP) — Canadian-owned Meadow Court, who placed second in the Epsom Derby, was favorite Friday following the acceptance stage for the Irish Sweep Derby scheduled for the Curragh June 26.

Another Canadian-owned horse, Nentego, also remained with some 30 other potential

Russians Never Beat Canadian Lacrosse Team

OTTAWA (CP)—Lacrosse and hockey supporters engaged in some verbal stick-swinging in the Commons Friday without, as usual, settling their perennial argument over which game rates as Canada's national sport.

Champions Establish Tee Targets

George Knudson and Gail Harvey shot rounds of 74 and 78 respectively in Toronto Thursday as target scores for Canadian duffers to shoot at until National Golf Week ends Sunday.

Every player at any club affiliated with the Royal Canadian Golf Association who pays a $1 fee and betters the scores during the week will receive an "I Beat the Champ" button.

Men golfers match their net scores against Knudson's 74 gross. Women's net scores must be under Miss Harvey's 78.

'FRISCO STAR IN POLO GAME HERE SUNDAY

Appearance of international polo star Harry Holman-Hicks will highlight a match for the George Calvert Memorial Cup Sunday at the Vancouver Island Polo Club grounds.

Hicks, a San Francisco who is also a noted big-game hunter, will be guest captain of a side competing against Saanich Greens.

Leading the Greens will be Dr. Bill Powell, who has played against Hicks, a two-goal player, on several occasions.

Seven-Under Sum Puts Aaron Ahead

CLEVELAND (AP)—Tommy Aaron, 28-year-old Georgia pro, took the half-way lead in the $125,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament Friday by carding a four-under-par 67.

Aaron's 135 total for 36 holes was seven under par and two strokes better than defending champion Tony LeMay and Gordon Jones.

Jones turned in the day's best round, a 66, to go with his even-par 71 Thursday. He birdied five holes in Highland Park's 6,821-yard front nine for a 31.

U.S. Open titlist Ken Venturi failed to make the cutoff when he finished with a 76-74-150. Al Johnston of Montreal also failed to make the cutoff when he ended the day with a 155. He shot a 74 Friday to go with an opening-day 81.

Lema dropped in a 12-foot putt on the final hole for a 70. He shot a 67 Thursday to share the lead with Billy Casper.

But Casper had alarm clock trouble Friday, arrived at the course only 10 minutes before tee time, had no time to warm up and soared to a 73 for a 140 total.

STRONG WOOD GAME HELPS

Joan Claims Third Crown

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Joan Lawson was "all set to go down the 19th fairway" but because golf matches are ultimately settled with putting blades, the Uplands ace had to accept, somewhat reluctantly, the city ladies' championship on the 18th green at Victoria Golf Club Friday.

The defending champion packed away her third title triumph when Oak Bay's Marge Todd three-putted the 18th green.

"I hate to win that way," Mrs. Lawson declared moments after Mrs. Todd missed a three-foot putt that would have sent the finalists into extra holes.

Mr. Lawson meant it and perhaps it was only natural that both finalists were disappointed because on 17 previous holes they served up what must be regarded as one of the more exciting finishes in some time.

Proof of Friday's playoff pudding rested with the fact that they halved only three of the 18 holes—the ninth, 13th and 14th.

Mrs. Lawson, especially brilliant with her woods, went three up after the first three holes. Mrs. Todd, displaying the scrappiness that helped her to win city honors on 11 previous occasions, charged back to square the match on the eighth.

They never lost sight of each other after that. The match was square after the ninth, 11th, 15th and 17th holes. In between, one or the other went one up.

Neither finalist was overawed by their approximate medal counts, a situation which indirectly may be attributed to the blustery conditions. Mrs.

Lawson carded an approximate 85, Mrs. Todd an 86.

Although Mrs. Lawson lacked her usual short-game accuracy, she more than made up for it with some impressive wood shots. A great wood shot to the 12th green resulted in one hole-claiming birdie.

More crucial, however, was a tee shot off the 17th. It was a 200-yarder, into-the-wind drive that came seconds after Mrs. Todd went one up. The ultimate result was a match-squaring par for Mrs. Lawson.

That brought them to the 18th, and a decision. And in fairness to Mrs. Todd, the crucial putt that was missed on the 18th was not an easy one, despite its apparent shortness.

Arthur Mayse

At intervals I am approached by one or other saucy young juggins who dares me to declare my views on sex; and so I will, when the crowd of scribblers around that interesting but over-labored subject thins to the point where a man can elbow his way through.

Today, though, I'd sooner talk about love, a biological phenomenon with overtones.

These become more clear as a man and woman deepen their relationship through shared experience which includes children if they're lucky, and ranges from great happiness to grief.

I think I understand love considerably better now than I did as a young man. In those years, one tends to be almost totally self-centred, also ungentle and arrogant.

Nature, I suppose, arranges matters thus. Certainly, without this concentration upon self, each new generation would have a horribly difficult time achieving elbow-room in a world dominated by its seniors.

In any case, as individuals, Win and I were wilful, proud and very stubborn. Admittedly, we were in love, a condition demonstrated by the fact that we were very much happier together than apart. Still, we approached marriage with the wariness of coons entering a boxtrap.

We made reservations. We insisted that the word "obey" be omitted from the ceremony. Between ourselves, we agreed that our contract should be renewable from year to year. Should one of us not wish to continue, we would part friends, without recriminations.

As I recall that beginning year, we were extremely serious about all this. At its end, we consulted solemnly... decided it was still better to travel together than alone... and entered on a second year.

Then, pausing only to remind our landlord by telephone that he had promised a month past to fix the balky coal furnace, we went off to shop frivolously for our weekend.

The house which we inhabited was a small grey stucco, box with roof corners that stuck up like battlements. It amused our friends, but we liked it, and did what we could to make it more than merely livable.

But our landlord remained hard to pin as an eel, and the furnace kept on giving us trouble.

There was also a window which seemed doomed never to get itself fixed. It had lost a tiny triangle of glass at the base of a crack that ran diagonally across a lower pane.

Any number of times we meant to buy new glass, but forgot. The time we did remember, I broke the pane while fetching it home.

As matters turned out, this accident bore significantly on our marriage with reservations.

One night I checked in at the office after a late assignment. I worked for a few minutes on my story, then phoned home.

Win answered after a long delay. She muttered in a sleep-sounding voice. But when I asked if something were wrong, there was only silence at the other end.

We hadn't replaced the fourth-hand car sold to buy a ring, so I called for a cab, then began phoning neighbors. They were all out. But the driver kept his gas pedal down, and we made a short trip of it.

I found Win barely conscious on the front room couch, to which she had stumbled from the phone. Her face was close to the nicked window; its trickle of life-saving air had saved her from a probably fatal dose of carbon monoxide.

Walking her up and down our block in fresh air unlimited, I caught, loud and clear, those overtones to love which let the hearer know he has become part of an indivisible whole called "We."

The landlord, scared, fixed the furnace. We decided to place our contract on a permanent basis. It still is.

DRIVE-IN PROTEST MOUNTS

are organizing a protest against proposed development of a drive-in theatre between Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Rd. Saanich council is expected to rule on an application for commercial zoning for the 14-acre parcel at its next meeting, June 21.

The application was made some time ago by Famous Players Canadian Corporation. They are seeking to develop a 1,200-car capacity drive-in theatre.

The ratepayers, headed by F. V. Thorne, 4379 Shelbourne, claim development of the movie would decrease property values.

youngsters donned traditional dress for their frolics with Reno in the pool at Kinsmen Gorge Park.

COUNCILS ASKED:

'Help to Fight Gorge Pollution'

The newly-formed Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterways Association has started an intensive campaign to protest sewage pollution of the Gorge.

Letters asking for further support of the organization have been delivered to municipal clerks of surrounding municipalities.

"Our organization is new and we need the benefit of your experience in this fight," says a letter to the clerks signed by Richard M. Faulks, chairman of the association.

A representative of the group is expected to participate in a panel discussion on Gorge pollution next week.

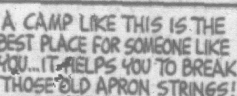

The panel, entitled The Gorge and its Future, will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Craigflower School.

It is sponsored by the Capital Region Branch, Community Planning Association of Canada. Moderator will be Don Mathison, an executive member of the branch.

Other panelists include engineer Russell Potter, Saanich Councillor William Campbell and naturalist Freeman King.

"This is not intended as a battle between Gorge-lovers and Saanich. We want to put the controversy in its proper perspective, branch president Mrs. B. Levitz Packford said today.

Ask The Times

Q. When and how did the practice of eating fish on Fridays originate in the Catholic Church? R.C.

A. The Roman Catholic Church does not enforce eating of fish on Fridays, but rather the abstinence from flesh meat—a luxury in primitive times, advises Rev. W. H. Hill of St. Andrew's Cathedral. The practice is enjoined on Christians as a communal reparation for the sins of mankind and was felt to be fitting on Fridays as an expression of union with Christ in his death on the cross.

The custom was first mentioned in the document known as the "Didache," or the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, dating from around 100 A.D.

NO SUNSHINE OR KISSES for Mrs. G. White. For her the day was made with a handful of flowers. Mrs. White, of 401 Henry, was one of many exhibitors at St. Saviour's Parish Hall flower show, Catherine and Henry, this afternoon. The show ends at 9 tonight.

Want a 36-24-36? Pump in More Air!

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

She's a stunning 17-year-old Norwegian blonde called Anne, at the St. John Ambulance headquarters on Pandora.

Anne-Resusc-Air is her full name—is a life-sized doll used for demonstrations in the St. John Save-a-Life program.

A lecture and actual demonstration of artificial respiration methods, with Anne as the victim, are included in the program, open to any interested persons or organizations.

The demonstrations will take place every Monday this month at 7:30 p.m., and information is available by calling 388-5505.

The St. John official who described Anne's appearance became quite lyrical about her charms.

Real hair, he said, of a natural golden blonde color. She looks just like a 16- or 17-year-old girl, he assured us. Feet and hands are perfect.

But did he have any idea of her measurements? "Oh, heavens, no!" replied the official. "That depends on how much you inflate her."

Bilge Keel Next On Rocking Ship

Endeavour Job to Cost $20,000

Marine Reporter

The RCN's $4.5 million oceanographic research ship Endeavour will be fitted with bilge keels to reduce rolling in heavy seas.

Concern about the ship's stability was expressed recently when she was operating in heavy seas and fears were expressed that the ship would founder.

The new keels will be installed shortly amidships below the waterline below Endeavour's housework, the navy announced.

LENGTH OF SHIP

The keel system, which differs from stabilizing fins which run the total length of a ship, will augment its present flume tank anti-roll system.

The keels will extend from the hull about 10 to 12 inches. They will be of steel construction and will be either welded or riveted to the ship.

"This is nothing new in marine design. The icebreaker Camels used to have them," research ship engineer Ted Fleischer said today.

OIL AS BALLAST

The Endeavour's present anti-roll system uses stabilization tanks on each side of the ship with oil as ballast. Officials say the maximum roll is 25 degrees to either side.

In previous sea trials the ship rolled too fast for the oil to get to the tank on the opposite side.

But when it did arrive, it increased the roll, rather than reducing it.

"It is hoped the keels will slow down the roll and give the oil more time to reach the other tank."

"This way it will complement the tanks and make them more effective," Mr. Fleischer said. "Ultimately, we will cut the roll down to 10 degrees or less," Mr. Fleischer said.

Cost of installing the new keels has been estimated at $20,000. She is scheduled for another deep-sea cruise July 5.

DRIVER HITS POLE; IN FAIR CONDITION

A 46-year-old man is in fair condition today after receiving head injuries in a collision with a power pole at Oak Bay Junction at 3 this morning.

Robert Taylor, 2617 Dalhousie, also received a fractured arm in the mishap. He is in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Police said his car was going west on Fort when it hit a pole on the north corner of Fort and St. Charles.

FEDERALISTS HERE

World Gov't 'Only Hope For Peace'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

World Government enthusiasts are not vague, dreamy-eyed visionaries—they are "the only true realists in the world today."

So says Mrs. Virginia McDonald, attractive dark-haired executive secretary of the World Federalists of Canada, which opened a three-day conference here today.

"We are realistic because we know there will always be dissensions and conflicts between nations and between groups and individuals within nations," said Mrs. McDonald, interviewed on her arrival from Ottawa.

That is the general opinion of more than 100 delegates from all parts of Canada meeting in the Empress Hotel under the presidency of Prof. C. S. Burchill of Victoria.

Realism

"Because of our realism," Mrs. McDonald continued, "we know there must be a world organization to control and rationalize disputes and enmities existing within the organization itself."

"World government is our only hope—for war is clearly a normal process in human history. We are not do-gooders or dreamy-eyed visionaries—we are seeking a rational approach to the threat of world destruction."

Mrs. McDonald revealed that the World Federalists of Canada now has a membership of about 1,900. The U.S. Federalist organization has more than 20,000 members while Japan has hundreds of thousands.

Japan Biggest

"Japan is actually one of our biggest strongholds. Red China, alas, is a question mark at present."

Other delegates expressed similar views in different words.

"What is happening in Viet Nam will happen again and again in many parts of the world," said Toronto businessman Arnold Simoni, who was born in Austria and raised in Switzerland.

In his crisp, precise English, he said:

"We must have a world organization that will keep these distant wars under control and prevent them from flaring into a global conflagration."

Mr. Simoni said it has been estimated that, in the event of a Soviet missile attack, the death toll would be in the range of 145,000,000.

"Up to now, the general fear of war has prevented such a catastrophe. But we have no assurance this will continue. As the last world war recedes into history, the fear of war will decrease and children now growing up may have no fear of it at all."

Mrs. McDonald said many young people today seem indifferent to international peace movements.

"The exceptions are earnest groups of youngsters who are interested in improving life in general and are busy studying the causes of war in schools and universities."

Born in Ottawa, Mrs. McDonald studied international law at the University of Birmingham, England, from 1955 to 1958. She joined the World Federalists of Canada six years ago after her marriage to Dr. J. C. McDonald of the federal labor department in Ottawa.

Prof. Burchill said the climate for international peace movements was much less favorable in 1950—the time of the Korean War—than now.

'With Us'

"Today most people are with us in principle even if they are skeptical of our aims."

Prof. and Mrs. Burchill welcomed delegates this morning and said the conference was shaping on promising lines.

Reports of officers were heard at closed sessions this morning and were followed by working committees on policy constitution, finance and membership this afternoon.

"We are not a rigid organization," said Mr. Simoni. "We must keep fluid in order to absorb new ideas and adapt them to changing conditions."

Keynote speaker is Baroness (Edith) Summerskill of Kentwood, England, who is expected to arrive in Victoria late tonight. She will address a public meeting in the McPherson Playhouse Monday at 8 p.m.

DUNBAR SHOW POPULAR, PROFITABLE

The tuneful, bright variety show starring John Dunbar which has been playing nightly at the McPherson Playhouse this week, is the first professional show to have come out with a profit, according to the show's promoters, Tony Elise and Tony Nicholson.

About 2,500 persons will have attended by the time tonight's final performance is concluded.

Rush seats are still available for tonight. Curtain is at 8:30.

WHEN YOU'RE ON HONEYMOON the rest of the world can do what it likes. Gary and Gaye Blockslee — they were married Thursday — had only eyes for each other when they arrived in Victoria today. The couple was chosen Tourists of the Week by Victoria Jaycees. Gary is from Laramie, Wyoming, his bride from Seattle.

DEAR ABBY...

Nix!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A currently successful woman author seems to be harping on the theory that in order for a woman to be "fulfilled," even though she is a wife and mother, she needs a profession or a job outside her home. You are a "pro," Abby. How do you feel about that?

STAY-AT-HOME MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I am one "pro" who is "con" on that theory. Motherhood (at least until the children are in school all day) is a full-time job. And if it is done properly, it more than "fulfills" a woman. There is no greater responsibility than guiding a life. And no greater reward than the knowledge that you have done it well.

DEAR ABBY: My skin crawled when I read that letter from "Heartbroken Mother."

pleading with all mothers to keep electric extension cords "unplugged" when not in use because of the tragic accident her child had when she put a "live" cord in her mouth. I want you and that mother to know that that letter has helped at least one thoughtless mother. I used to keep an extension cord for my vacuum cleaner plugged into the wall behind my couch. That way I didn't have to pull out the couch each time I vacuumed. My 10-month-old daughter has just started to crawl, and when I think of how easy it would have been for her to get hold of that cord and put it in her mouth, my blood runs cold. I immediately disconnected that cord and it is now hanging in the broom closet. My thanks to you, Abby, for printing that letter. I lost one son to a congenital heart defect last year, and would have to lose the only child I have left to electrocution because of my carelessness.

Sincerely,

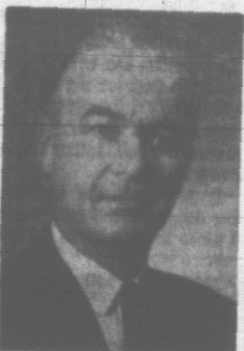

MRS. H. Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

STRABISMUS

Strabismus, or squint, is the condition where the eyes are turned from their normal position either inwards or outwards. When the eyes are not in their normal position two greatly different images are presented... one from each eye. This is very confusing to the brain and the person will see double for a time and then one image will be ignored, and only one eye is used in seeing.

The result is a lowering of vision in the unused eye. This condition is particularly serious in childhood because if one eye goes unused for even a short time, then there will be little or no vision in that eye later in life. Squint can very often be overcome with glasses or visual training or both, but sometimes an operation is required to straighten the eye. It is advisable to have your eyes examined at least every two years.

TODAY'S RECIPE

COOL FRUIT AND LETTUCE MOLD

One head lettuce; 2 packages (3 oz. each) lemon gelatin; 3 cups boiling water; 3 tablespoons lemon juice; 1 banana, sliced; 1 cup cantaloupe balls or cubes; 1/4 cup strawberries; 1/4 cup real mayonnaise and 2 tablespoons prepared horseradish.

Core, rinse and drain lettuce. Place in plastic bag or wrap in saran; chill. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Measure 1 1/2 cups gelatin mixture and set aside. Add lemon juice to remaining gelatin; chill until mixture mounds on spoon. Gently fold in fruits. Turn into 6-cup mold; chill until almost firm.

Meanwhile, blend remaining gelatin with mayonnaise and lettuce lengthwise into halves. Place cut-sides down on board and shred across heart with sharp knife to make 2 cups. (Refrigerate any remaining lettuce for use another time.) Fold shredded lettuce into gelatin-mayonnaise mixture; turn onto fruit layer in mold. Chill in refrigerator several hours until firm.

To serve, dip mold briefly in warm water up to top edge. Place serving plate upside-down on top of mold; invert and lift mold off gelatin. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Mabel, one of the cows on John Severs' Central Saanich Road farm takes a proprietary interest in the prowess of the young fishermen who take over her irrigation pond Saturday afternoons. Here, she gives encouragement to left to right, Murray Brown and Dave Rigby, both 14; Danny Cunningham, 12, and seven-year-old Billy Adkin.

That old-time favorite, "How're You Going to Keep Them Down on the Farm?" hasn't any meaning for Howard English and nine other Lower Vancouver Island farmers. They have no trouble keeping their pastures looking as if they're the sites of a Peace Marchers' rally on Saturday afternoons!

The reason why the 10 farms are so popular lies in an exciting project, initiated by Howard and his nine friends. Sharing the laurels are Gordon Rendle, George Doney, Albert Bean, Jim Godfrey, Pat Hoale, Willard and Tommy Michell, John Severs and John Arnaud.

Says Howard, "We were concerned about the small fry in our areas who are unable to indulge in that oldest of all sports, fishing. Nowadays, the old creeks are dried up and there's nowhere for a lad to go. Also, we wanted to do our bit to teach the next generation the good basic rules of conservation."

The 10 farmers determined to do something about the problem. The first thing was to find good fishing grounds. "What's wrong with using our irrigation ponds?" asked the enthusiasts.

Having solved the site problem, the farmers set about supplying the fish for their young guests. The first year, Howard bought his own but for the past two years the provincial government has recognized the value of the program and supplied the farmers (they call themselves the Fish-Builders) with substantial stocks of rainbow trout. Last year, the young fishermen—aged eight to 16—managed to catch a bag of 1,600.

Each Saturday, the numbers grow, many of the youngsters cycling as far as 10 miles for the afternoon's fishing. Greater Victoria is well represented in the membership.

They're taught how to cast, play a fish and all the other intangibles that go into making a good fisherman. Helping the farmer-mentors with their teaching are members of the Victoria Fish and Game Club. To round out the youngsters' instruction, officials of the provincial fish and game department guide them in the paths of good conservation.

With the type of community-minded farmers we have in our area, there's no reason why Vancouver Island shouldn't be able to produce the largest batch of Mark Twains in history!

There's none of that new-fangled nonsense for pretty 11-year-old Donna Doney when she goes after the big ones—Fancy flies may be fine for some of her friends but Donna pins her faith on good old-fashioned worms. She enjoys doing her own baiting, too!

Fishy Vales

Thirteen-year-old Ricky Chatten is a little wary of the bait chosen by his chum, Sylvia Severs, the farmer's 11-year-old daughter. His nose tells him that, although salmon eggs may be irresistible to rainbow trout, their scent isn't exactly comparable to Chanel No. 5!

"To heck with fishing!" says Derie Rigby as he reads his book and courts a suntan while his son and other young fishermen woo the waters. He admits to liking a spot of fishing once in a while but "prefers to get my kicks from skin-diving."

Fishing is thirsty work so grandmothers and mothers are always welcome at weekly fish-outs to help feed the rookie fishermen with cookies, laced down with pop. Taking a pause that refreshes is Ken Exton, 11, son of Mrs. Ted Exton, second from left. Also in the informal group are, left to right, Mrs. Nick Nish, an enthusiastic grandmother; Mrs. Rudy Engstrom, Mrs. Ted Friske and her two sons, two-year-old Brian and Clayton, four, who are impatient to grow up so that they can join the rest of the fishing fraternity.

Girls refuse to take a back seat when it comes to showing their skill at spin casting. Here, Marilyn Healey, 12, casts like a veteran, intent on hooking herself one of the big ones.

Excitement mounts as the finishing time nears and each girl and boy hopes for that lucky strike that will net them the biggest catch of the afternoon. At such a time, the irrigation pond becomes the top contender for the most scrutinized farm pool in Canada.

Hats to make you prettier . . .

We're not actually suggesting you wear a hat for a quick jaunt to the supermarket . . . but after you've seen the delicious summer hats at Miss Frith's, we're willing to bet you won't want to fare forth very Frith without one . . . if only because they're so outrageously flattering . . . and leaving aside the undeniable fact that no well turned-out woman would ever appear downtown hatless . . . Then there's church, weddings, luncheons and daytime social gatherings all of which call for a pretty hat . . . After not visiting Miss Frith's for three weeks, we were delighted anew with their beautiful selection of summery chapeaux . . . Newest are the organzas . . . so light and airy you wouldn't know you had anything on your head . . . but so pretty they turn the plainest frock into an ensemble . . . Most have layered brims . . . but there's a coral turban with bow atop which we fell completely in love with . . . Wide-brimmed mohairs in white or beige are also light as cream puffs . . . Some nice tailored white straws to wear with everything . . . Incidentally, by the time you read this Miss Frith's 45th anniversary sale will be under way . . . Terrific bargains all over the store! . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., EV 3-4912.

Learn to dance this summer . . .

Here's something to think about: Have you ever said "let's just sit this one out" when the dance band struck up a rumba, samba, cha-cha-cha, tango . . . or even a dreamy waltz . . . simply because you knew you couldn't tackle it . . . but envied those who could? . . . Then now's the time to get with it and prepare to literally "have a ball" when next fall's social season gets under way . . . You'd be surprised how easy it is to learn to dance at Arthur Murray's . . . Their teaching methods are recognized as tops all over this continent . . . and here at the Victoria studio we think they're especially good at turning shy, diffident (or even just plain clumsy people) into beautifully confident and skilful dancers! . . . Another thing that would surprise you is the number of older men and women who are growing younger by the hour learning to dance at Arthur Murray's . . . or brushing up on almost-forgotten dancing skills! . . . The studio is open all summer, from noon to 10 p.m. It's cool and spacious . . . has a most relaxing atmosphere . . . Private lessons or classes . . . and just to make it perfect, special summer rates are now in effect . . . Why not pick up the phone and enquire? . . . ## To Dad, with love . . .

Wondering what to give Father on Sunday, June 20th? . . . Well, judging from our own past experience, while our dad has always been properly appreciative of any offering tendered . . . his eyes have positively lighted up when a box of Welch's chocolates has been presented . . . so we intend to repeat again this year! . . . If father has a sweet tooth . . . (which we're convinced most men have) . . . you simply can't go wrong with a box of candy . . . and of course the candy par excellence here in Victoria is that made by Welch's . . . There's something like 50 varieties to choose from . . . You can have a box made up which includes all of Dad's favorites . . . hard or soft . . . crunchy or mouth-melting . . . chewy or gooey! . . . Or if you don't know his favorites, just ask for a box of Welch's assorted, which contains all of the popular varieties . . . then wait to see the ones he pounces on first for future reference! . . . One of the reasons Welch's are so much enjoyed by everyone who likes candy is they're made fresh daily . . . from the very finest ingredients . . . real butter, fresh cream . . . crispy nuts . . . Candy so chock-full of good things just can't help being delicious! . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 383-4422.

Travelling without tears . . .

Admittedly our recent trip south was small potatoes as far as travelling goes . . . but believing in practising what we preach, we had Paulin Travel Service book our flights . . . which involved several airlines . . . and we can't begin to tell you how fast, efficiently and "hitchlessly" it was handled! . . . And of course at no cost beyond the regular price of the tickets . . . First of all Paulin's looked up schedules and advised us on the best flights for the days we wanted to travel . . . keeping in mind our convenience and the various factors involved in changing airlines . . . (you'll appreciate what we mean if you know that vast colossus of an airport at L.A.). Then they made our reservations within minutes, wrote out our tickets, gave us a typewritten travel schedule and bade us bon voyage . . . All WE did was hand them a cheque for the amount of the air fare, and thank them nicely! . . . Anyway, the point we're trying to make is that if you're travelling anywhere at all . . . by air, rail or sea . . . let Paulin's take care of everything . . . You'll get friendly, personalized service, expert informed advice . . . free yourself of all the pesky details . . . and at no extra cost! . . . ## In Step With Style

New Look Makes Debut In Cosmetics

By NONA DAMASKE

Early in January at an elegant luncheon in the ballroom of the Hotel Pierre in New York, over 200 fashion writers were given a beauty "scoop" and then sworn to secrecy until further notice.

Last week my secrecy release arrived and "In Step With Style" is happy to be the first in Victoria to announce that the most famous name in the field of hair care and hair color will now have the total look in beauty with a cosmetic collection.

The company has spent 10 years developing this idea, making up and lip colors that are "keyed to the color of your hair." Your crowning glory is, by far, your most dominant color point and the color that other people notice first about you. A make-up tint that will harmonize with your hair color and blend naturally with your skin tone seems like a most logical idea.

The cosmetics are now on their way to Victoria and when the new display is ready you will be able to chart your own color course if you wish. Just match a snip of your hair to the hair shades on the "Color Whirl" find your skin tone, and your complete make-up analysis is there for you to read.

A new world of cosmetic color . . . make-up keyed to hair shade. The model chose flame and when her tint tone is found on the "Color Whirl," co-ordinating make-up shades are all there . . . chosen by the people who made her tint.

The shade tones are simply named and although the choice is extensive, there are not so many that you feel completely confused. Cream nail color comes in an actual match or in a harmonizing tone as you wish.

Simplicity is the keynote. You do not have to be an amateur chemist, free-hand artist or professional painter to achieve a naturally lovely appearance.

The packaging is attractive, not ostentatious, but appealing to the eye. Burnished amber etched in gold is a rich combination. The price range is what I call a "you and me" bracket . . . moderate. The only women who may find this make-up a little expensive is the one who changes hair color every other month.

Watch your newspaper advertisements for announcement of the arrival this whole new concept is make-up.

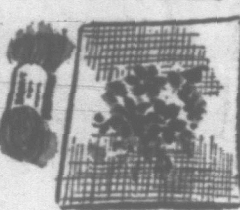

I will be in Montreal when you read this. During the week I will be sending a story on the Canadian National Collection of Fashion arranged by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

No Best Time for Exercise Just Do Them Sometime!

The idea that the time of day you do exercises makes a difference in the results seems to persist. This isn't true at all. The important thing is to do them sometime every day.

The only exception is that you should try to wait for three hours after eating when ever this is feasible. You will get the same results from exercise done in the morning, mid-morning, afternoon or night. Fit it in at the point which is most convenient for you.

Naturally this differs with individuals since none of us have the same life patterns. I usually suggest exercise in the morning because it is so easy to alibi at the end of the day by saying that you are too tired. Often this fatigue is not physical and exercise is the best of all medicines for that end-of-the-day drag.

Many women like to take their exercises in the late afternoon after most of the chores are done and before bathing and dressing for the evening. Others prefer exercising just before going to sleep at night, while still more like to exercise when they first get up in the morning.

One warning to the last group! Work into the exercise gradually, by walking about the room for a short period. You have been completely inactive for hours. Don't place a strain on your heart by jumping right out of bed into strenuous gymnastics.

PETTICOAT PATT

By Judy Creighton

If the director of the television series "Perry Mason" or "The Defenders" had seen me the other day, I would have been hired to play a role on the spot!

I was, for the first time in my life, a principal character in what I thought was a true court drama—and though it wasn't amusing at the time, I must admit that the local law makers appeared as if they wished that women didn't exist behind the wheel of a car let alone in a court room!

My appearance in court was caused by a small traffic accident several weeks ago, but to this novice, it was a gigantic case to be recorded in law books for future generations to digest.

To make matters worse, my family and friends "underplayed" the event, so my display of shattered nerves, pacing the floor, wearing of dark glasses, etc., was ignored and as the date of the case drew near the only person concerned—was me!

Friends Are No Help

No amount of answers to my questions from those who had been through the ordeal of a few hours in court, could satisfy my concern. "It will all work out" they blandly said or "Don't worry, the facilities in jail are not bad and the meals are very good!"

The night before the big day, I scanned my clothes closet. Now what does one wear to court?

The way I looked and felt, a sheet covering me from head to toe would be the answer! Unfortunately, I'd be a candidate for a psychiatrist in such garb.

After watching numerous television serials where the women dress in large brimmed hats that dip to their noses, or heavy veils and dark glasses, it seemed in keeping to do the same.

First Laugh In Days

"Just look natural," said my husband casually. Natural? I looked such a wreck, this suggestion just made me laugh for the first time in days.

The morning dawned bright and clear—I know, I hadn't slept a wink all night.

As we entered the courtroom and sat down, I clumsily dropped my purse—my hands were shaking so badly.

When it was my turn to take the stand, I nervously got up from my seat went, forward, and suddenly had the oddest feeling my petticoat was showing. Ordinarily, I would have hitched it up, but under the close scrutiny of all those men I could only hope they were looking the other way!

Gives Nervous Smack

Taking the solemn oath, I took the Bible handed to me by the court clerk, bowed my head and kissed the Holy Book with a smack that I was later told could be heard right to the back of the room.

Two hours later I left the court room with heart much lighter. It really hadn't been such an ordeal after all—at least not for me.

I turned around and viewed the relieved expressions on the faces of these legal minded males behind me. Then I knew they were glad to see my back!

Nora Taylor Married In Ceremony Today

One of the most attractive weddings of the year took place in Holy Trinity Church at Patricia Bay this afternoon when Nora Campbell Taylor became the bride of Eric John Clarke. The fair-haired bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. James M. Taylor, 895 Towner Park Road. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Clarke, 2245 McNeill Avenue.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Walter Tate, the bride was lovely in an exquisite gown of white Gupure lace over lace in an ivory tone. The floor-length gown was styled on a relaxed A-line and featured elbow-length bishop sleeves and a high boat neckline. Her veil of delicate tulle misted to floor-length from a white silk bow. Trailing ivy accented the bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Yellow snapdragons and white stocks decorated the altar and remainder of the church while pews were marked with nose-gays of Esther Reed daisies.

Canon F. C. Vaughan-Birch heard the marriage vows. The wedding music included Handel's "Largo," the hymns, "Holy, Holy, Holy" and "Praise My Soul." The recessional was Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

Carrying out the floral decor, the four attendants were dressed in floor-length gowns of lemon yellow silk, styled with scoop necklines, elbow-length bishop sleeves, fitted bodices and skirts gentled with softly draped box pleats. Their wide-brimmed picture hats were in tone. Tracings of ivy highlighted their bouquets of yellow-centred white feathered chrysanthemums.

Miss Penny Wilson was maid of honor, Mrs. Colin Creighton was bridesmatron, and bridesmaids were the Misses Gillian Scott and Penny Cockburn, Vancouver.

Dr. Michael Ross was best man. Ushering guests to their pews were Dr. Hamish Redford, Peter McAllister, Dr. James Donald, the groom's brother-in-law, and Harry Taylor, brother of the bride.

A garden reception followed at the home of the bride's grandmother. Yellow snapdragons and white stocks decorated the bride's table and were also used as decor in the living room.

J. Harold Wilson proposed the toast to the bride's happiness. After receiving the congratulations of their many guests, the young couple left on a honeymoon trip to an unknown destination.

As her going-away ensemble, the bride chose a peacock green silk suit that had a box jacket, fashioned with a tiny collar and trimmed with frog fastenings. The skirt was cut on slim lines. Her hat was of toning silk rib.

On return, the newlyweds will make their home in Victoria.

Wedding In St. Paul's, Esquimalt

FAMILY HEIRLOOM WORN

An heirloom gold bracelet which had belonged to her grandmother fulfilled the tradition of "something old" for Suzanne Jane McLean this afternoon when she became the bride of Robert George Evans.

The empire-line gown worn by the bride was styled with an A-line skirt of nylon crepe and bodice of heavy re-embroidered lace. The bodice featured a high round neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. A short train extended from a bow at back waistline. Her shoulder-length veil misted from a circlet of crepe and she carried a bouquet of blue cornflowers and white daisies. Floral arrangements in blue and white tones decorated St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church when Rev. J. A. Roberts heard marriage vows exchanged between the daughter of surgeon Rear-Admiral T. B. McLean and Mrs. McLean, 2955 Rutland Rd., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Evans of Ottawa. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride's only attendant, Miss Martha Daysmith, chose a gown of robin's egg blue linen, and circlet headpiece, edged with tulle en tone. White Shasta daisies and white ribbons formed her bouquet.

The bride's brother, Gilbert McLean, was best man. Ushering guests to their pews were Robert Gibson and Douglas McLean, brother of the bride.

A decorated wishing well held the gifts. Guests included Mrs. J. Swetnam, Mrs. M. Gandy, Mrs. D. Townsend, Mrs. L. Cosh, Mrs. K. York, Mrs. G. Parker and Mrs. K. Robin.

Dr. Arthur B. Nash proposed the toast to the bride at the reception following in the home of the bride's parents.

Following the reception, the couple left for Toronto where they will spend the summer and then continue to Cambridge, Mass., where the groom will resume post-graduate studies in economics at Harvard University.

For travelling, the new Mrs. Evans donned a classic coral wool and silk blend suit with toning silk cloche hat and black patent accessories. A gardenia corsage completed her outfit.

Trust Main Need At Local Levels

REGINA (CP)—A committee to help foster "understanding, co-operation and friendship" at the local level between Anglicans, Roman Catholics, Orthodox Catholics and Protestants was suggested this week by Rt. Rev. G. F. C. Jackson, Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Qu'Appelle.

Bishop Jackson suggested the diocesan committee here during his address opening the 49th meeting of the synod of the Diocese of Qu'Appelle.

"The hope for Christian unity lies at the local level. Confidence and trust rather than suspicion needs to be established and co-operation rather than efforts at domination by one group over another," Bishop Jackson said.

The bishop said the latest step toward Christian unity was the joint Anglican-United church committee report suggesting principles on which organic union of the two communions could be based.

"But... it is not time to start jumping the gun by anticipating acceptance of this report... it could be rejected by either or both synods and even if it is accepted it will take at least 10 years to work out the details. Meanwhile the life of our respective communities must continue unabated until a better day shall dawn."

Any move toward unity by Anglicans must start in their own household, Bishop Jackson said.

"I believe unity is growing among us. Partyism is dying in the church and it may be hoped there will be no resurrection of it."

Prairie Trio Here Thursday

St. Andrew's

Church choirs, big and small, have often been called the backbone of a nation's music. They raise the morale of the service and keep up the tempo of the singing. Every Saturday, The Times will publish a picture of a Victoria choir.

MIXED CHOIR at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church is as old as the church itself—and that is 99 years. Mainstay of the choir for many years was famed-Victoria musician Jesse Longfield. The present choirmaster, C. C. Warren, has held the office for

September Retreat Planned

Christ Church Cathedral is offering retreats for men and women at Gabriola Island this September.

"The hectic pace and pressure of life today is a serious threat to health," says Dean Brian Whitlow. "Many people become so rushed and harried that they never seem to have time to be silent and still."

"An age of great technological advance has not brought with it a deepening of the spirit to match it. Noise and chatter, over-busy activity and the pressures of an urbanized society have combined to rob many people of that inner peace, which is the one thing which a human life needs most of all."

"What is called A Retreat is an excellent way to combat this unhealthy activist temper of our times. A Retreat is a few days (two or three) spent in complete silence (except for services and addresses) in the company of other people who value the same experience."

NEWS FROM CITY CHURCHES

De Roo to Speak Again At United Church Service

Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo will again address a United Church service this Sunday.

At 7:30 p.m. he will enter the historic First United at Quadra and Balmoral to speak on the Second Vatican Council, which met in Rome last autumn to discuss Christian unity.

Last Sunday the young bishop made history by addressing a service at Metropolitan. The church was packed with more than 1,300 people and many met him at a reception afterward.

This Sunday service is being sponsored by the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church of Canada and most United Churches in the area have cancelled their evening worship in order to attend.

"It should be a great occasion," said Rev. E. Laura Butler, chairman of the presbytery.

After the service Bishop De Roo will meet the congregation at a social hour in the Fellowship Hall.

At the 9:30 a.m. service in First United, the Youth Choir will perform the Thanksgiving Hymn.

David Conrad will sing "O Saviour Hear Me" (Gluck) at the 11 a.m. service and the choir will render the anthem Worship (Shaw.)

Delegates to the annual meeting of the World Federalists of Canada will attend this service which will be broadcast.

Canon Gorge Biddle will preach on The Holy Trinity in St. John's Anglican Church Sunday at 11 a.m.

The choir at St. Andrew's Presbyterian, directed by organist William McColl, will sing Bread of the World (Garland) at the morning service and Sun of My Soul (Turner) in the evening.

Very Rev. J. Lewis McLean, D.D., will speak on The Action in the morning and The Burning Bush in the evening.

In Metropolitan United Sunday morning, the Sanctuary Choir, conducted by Dr. James Gayfer, will sing Spirit Divine (Grafenberger) and Lift Up Your Heads (Coleridge-Taylor).

The Junior-Teen Choir, led by Mrs. Fern Ratcliffe, will sing Seek Ye The Lord (Roberts) and Shirley Parkinson will offer the solo I Believe.

At the organ Eric Boothroyd will play Fantasia in A (Rheinberger).

The evening worship will be in First United.

Returning to Fairfield United after an absence of three weeks, Rev. H. W. Kerley will speak on Possessing by Being Possessed.

Three Victoria priests have been assigned to new duties by Most Rev. Remi De Roo, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria.

Rev. Lewis MacLellan, pastor of Queen of Peace parish, Esquimalt, for 21 years becomes chaplain of Loretto Hall Institute for the elderly on Belleville Street.

Rev. Michael McNamara of St. Patrick's, Oak Bay, has been assigned to Queen of Peace parish.

Rev. Arthur Leonard, diocesan director of education, will be pastor of St. Patrick's parish.

The choir at Oak Bay United Church, directed by Robert Kroeger, will sing My Shepherd Will Supply My Need at the morning worship.

Mrs. P. Busfield will be soloist and Rev. Alexander Calder will speak on The Saving Minority.

Victoria British Israel Association will hold a public meeting in the Newstead Hall, 734 Fort Street, Tuesday at 7:45 p.m.

There will be a recorded lecture by Rev. P. Shenton of England, entitled Ambassadors for Christ.

Unity Topic Of Assistant At St. John's

Rev. John Sandys-Wunsch, the new assistant priest at St. John's Anglican Church, Victoria, was, until recently in charge of the West Coast Mission.

Sunday evening he will preach on Church Union in the light of recent recommendations for uniting the Anglican and United churches of Canada.

Mr. Sandys-Wunsch (pronounced Sands-Winch) will serve under Canon George Biddle, who is to retire from St. John's on July 31.

"It will be a pleasure to work with him," the new minister said.

Originally a Rhodes Scholar, Mr. Sandys-Wunsch studied at Oxford University, England, from 1956 to 1959, then won a Rotary Fellowship to Strasbourg in France.

Later he studied in Germany on an exchange scholarship.

Pioneered Church

Thomas Starr King—the 19th-century Unitarian missionary who pioneered the church on the Pacific coast—will be discussed by Rev. Marvin Evans at Victoria Unitarian Church, 106 Superior Street, Sunday at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

'Best Baptist Bum' To Paddle Mackenzie

VANCOUVER (CP)—A minister who calls himself the "best Baptist bum who ever existed" says he plans to paddle the Mackenzie River this summer.

Rev. Ray Price, Baptist minister at Yellowknife, N.W.T., says he plans to canoe from Yellowknife to Inuvik at the mouth of the Mackenzie, starting in July.

He disclosed his plans in an interview here during the weekend. He was here to attend the annual convention of the Baptist Union of Western Canada.

Mr. Price travels the western Arctic by hitching free rides with bush pilots and on river barges.

"I'm the best Baptist bum who ever existed," he said.

The only known Baptist minister in the Arctic, the 33-year-old minister said he intends to stop at "every shack I find along the river."

Mr. Price played professional cricket in England before moving to Canada in 1956.

He was baptist minister at Flin Flon, Man., for seven years before moving to Yellowknife in 1963.

Members Urged To Find Areas Of Agreement

The Christian Science board of directors has urged its church members to find the areas of agreement which exist with other denominations.

"We should not think of ourselves as entirely different or exclusive," the directors said. "From the church's earliest beginnings, Christians have been involved in the search for the real source of unity."

The message was presented before several thousand members at the annual meeting of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

"To every honest adherent of any God-centred faith sincerely working to uplift and unify the human race, we offer our fellowship and support."

"The working basis of Christian Science is that the understanding of God as divine love, all-inclusive spirit, is the one force that can truly hold men together in understanding and harmony."

Festival Of Films

A festival of films and arts will be held in Pendray Hall, adjoining Metropolitan United Church, from Wednesday to Saturday. The festival hopes to raise funds to send a delegate to the Moral Rearmament conference at Mackinac Island, Mich., from July 15 to Sept. 15.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL and Mrs. Georges Vanier were greeted this week by Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo at St. Andrew's Cathedral. The General and Mrs. Vanier are currently on a farewell trip across Canada and spent three days in the city before travelling to Vancouver.

NEW TYPE VACCINATION MAY BEAT COMMON COLD

NEW YORK (UPI)—Science has satisfied itself that a proper vaccination could prevent people from catching the common cold. Its next step will be to find out if a proper vaccination is possible against this foremost of the minor nuisances plaguing mankind.

Scientists made a "killed virus" vaccine from one strain of the "M" rhinoviruses and vaccinated 28 persons with it. Later they put live viruses of another but related strain directly into their noses. Only one of the 28 came down with a cold.

The same dosage of viruses were put into the noses of 23 other volunteers who hadn't been vaccinated. Eleven of them developed colds which is the proportion to be expected since it is known that even in the most unprotected-person cold viruses don't take over readily.

13 VACCINATED

Thirteen volunteers were vaccinated with the same vaccine and then planted with common cold viruses of another type. Six of them got colds while seven out of 10 unvaccinated persons challenged with the same viruses, got them.

This went to show the antibodies produced by one type of common cold virus gave no protection against another type, and it was discouraging because science isn't sure how many types of common cold viruses there are but is sure there are more than just a few.

On the encouraging side, was the way the killed virus vaccine produced antibodies specific for the virus in the blood of vaccinated persons. The levels measured out high enough to take care of any virus the antibodies encountered. And they persisted at these effective heights for a year to 18 months.

Top 'Y' Leaders Given Trophies At Dinner Fete

Seventy men and women were honored this week at the annual YM-YWCA recognition dinner for volunteer leaders.

Trophies for outstanding achievements during 1964 were presented to selected leaders.

Bill Kent and Sandra Sexauer received the trophy for outstanding intermediate leadership. Don Williams won the junior leaders' trophy.

Swim team trophies went to Kerry Macfarlane and Eric Grossman. Robbie Robinson received particular mention for outstanding leadership in aquatics.

The group was entertained by pianist Paddy Heaton.

There now is sound reason to be hopeful medical science is going to do something about the common cold before too long. Its efforts are far advanced in both the United States and England but the English scientists are at the stage of test vaccines.

Open daily 9 to 6:30 p.m.

Queen, Barons Honor Magna Carta

LONDON (AP)—The Queen and British nobility honored Magna Carta Thursday in a ceremony that would have astonished the rough barons who imposed it on King John, 750 years ago.

Around the Queen in St. Paul's Cathedral were the latter-day barons of modern England—some of them stocky businessmen in drab suits—the church prelates and judges.

The Magna Carta document lay on a scarlet-draped reading desk before the steps of the sanctuary under Christopher Wren's great dome.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey, pointed out that the Magna Carta was not a declaration in the name of all the people in the land.

Little could the barons and the kings have known, Dr. Ramsey said, "that they were laying a foundation for great, far-reaching ideals and principles upon which not only a constitution but a civilization have come to stand."

Women Get Nod

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A discussion group of Anglican men and women agreed this week that women should be allowed to participate in diocesan synods and parish vestries or advisory councils in the church. A poll of delegates showed there were 14 diocesan synods which have women members elected.

Two more synods are expected to allow women delegates within the year.

Patriarch At Mercy Of Turks

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion-Writer

An old man of great height and towering physique is a subject of wide concern these days among Christian leaders.

The site of his historic post and the trouble whipping around it has stirred the worry about him—and the prayer.

"Extend from on high Thy mighty arm to give strength to... Patriarch Athenagoras."

Athenagoras I, patriarch of Constantinople and primate of the world's 200,000,000 Orthodox believers, occupies one of the most venerable sees in Christendom, and it is situated in the midst of sharp current tensions.

There have been tears, resulting from intimations by the Turkish government, that he might conceivably even be expelled.

That would be about like forcing the Pope to leave Rome. Although the patriarch, a gentle, warmly hospitable man of 79, fills a strictly spiritual office, its location puts him in the rippled of the Turkish-Greek conflict over the island of Cyprus.

There have been recurrent rumblings of pressure against him. Orthodoxy is a minority faith in Turkey, and many of its adherents are of Greek origin, although mostly of Turkish citizenship. Several thousand Greek nationals have been ousted, and expulsion of others threatened.

Turkey is predominantly Moslem. Ancient Constantinople is now its modern capital, Istanbul.

Both Roman Catholic and Protestant leaders in many countries have voiced concern about the patriarch's welfare and urged that his position and world-wide ecclesiastical functions be safeguarded.

A great, six-foot four-inch figure, in flowing black robe and cascading beard, Athenagoras, as patriarch of Constantinople, is the 261st successor of the Apostle Andrew, legendary founder of the church there, as Pope Paul VI is the 261st successor of the Apostle Peter, considered First Bishop of Rome.

The two had a dramatic meeting last year in the Holy Land—the first encounter between pope and patriarch in five centuries—opening the way to closer relationships between the two influential sees, divided since 1054 A.D.

Award-Winning Band To Perform Sunday

Gordon Head, Junior Secondary School band will play a concert in Beacon Hill Park Sunday at 3 p.m.

This will be the fourth in a series of five school band concerts at the park this year.

The 65-piece band, under the baton of Emil J. Michaux, is made up of students from 12 to 18 years of age.

Competing against senior secondary school bands, the Gordon Head group won the intermediate class competition.

Rare Animals Killed

MOSCOW (AP)—Poachers are slaughtering herds of gazelles, mountain sheep and rare horses on a game preserve in the central Asian republic of Turkmenia, Pravda has reported.

The Soviet-Communist party newspaper said many of the illegal hunters were high-ranking members of the local regime. It denounced local officials for indifference to the plight of the animals.

Kinsmen Club To Support Anti-Pollutionists

A spokesman for Victoria Kinsmen Club said Friday the organization would work with the Portage Inlet-Gorge Waterway Association anti-pollution committee.

The club will not make an independent submission in protest of a Saanich permit to increase treated effluent disposal into the waterway, although its interests in Gorge Park are affected.

He said the club was unanimous in agreeing that until tidal action in the Gorge does a more efficient job of flushing the waterway, Kinsmen are "definitely against any dumping or pollution of the waters."

Stick With Bus to Bitter End?

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

Miss Jessie Gordon, president of the Vancouver Island Philatelic Society, was elected president of the North West Federation of Stamp Clubs for the 1965-66 season when she attended the annual stamp exhibition and convention held at Seattle at the end of last month.

The federation, with which all the important philatelic societies in B.C., Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Alaska are affiliated, has chosen Victoria to be the venue for its 1966 exhibition. It will be held at the Empress Hotel May 27-31.

The federation's annual show is the most important philatelic event of the year in this part of the world, and a large attendance may be expected both from the mainland and from the U.S.A.

Mrs. J. Turner, secretary of the Greater Victoria Philatelic Society, exhibited her collection of Railway Stamps at the Seattle show and was awarded a bronze medal.

NEW ISSUE NOTES: Jamaica brought out two special stamps on May 17 to commemorate the golden jubilee of the Girl Guides, values being 3d and 1s.

The latter is a triangular stamp, and don't imagine that you have a rarity if it happens that the pineapple watermark is up-side-down, because owing to the make-up of the sheets every other row of stamps shows the watermark inverted.

Malawi has had to resort to surcharging a couple of its stamps owing to a raise in postal rates. The 1s 3d, and 2s 6d are being over-printed 7s 6d and 3s, respectively June 14. Another surcharged issue is reported from Malaysia, where the 8c Postage Due label is being raised to 10c. The I.T.U. set for this territory will consist of three locally-designed stamps—2c, 25c, and 50c.

Other Commonwealth countries which are issuing special stamps for the I.T.U. Centenary, are Ceylon, Kenya-Uganda-Tanganyika, Cyprus, Gambia and Zambia. These are in addition to the omnibus issues for the 32 crown colonies, and other Commonwealth countries which have been already mentioned in previous articles.

On July 7 Malta will issue a special set of stamps to commemorate the VII Centenary of the birth of Dante Alighieri. Values will be 2d, 6d and 2s.

WHO IS WHO HERE?

Among the students who enrolled recently in a large university are four named Allen, Daniel, Lewis and Frank. In the same university there are a president, a professor, an instructor, and a janitor whose names are Mr. Allen, Mr. Daniel, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Frank, but not necessarily in this order and not necessarily the fathers of the students.

1. The student with the same name as the professor belongs to the fraternity of which Frank is a member.
2. The daughter-in-law of Mr. Daniel lives in Philadelphia.
3. The oldest son of the president is seven.
4. The janitor's wife has never seen Mr. Frank.
5. The father of one of the students always confuses Lewis with Daniel.
6. Mr. Lewis is the father-in-law of the instructor and has no grandchildren.

From these facts it is possible to determine quickly the respective names of the president, the professor, the instructor and the janitor. Can you?

PUT FEET FIRST?
Careful, or you'll put your foot in your mouth in this quiz. See if you can answer all five questions on feet correctly.

1. What Roman god had winged feet?
2. What has three feet and can't walk?
3. Whose feet made such an impression on Robinson Crusoe?
4. What popular nursery rhyme is recited with aid of feet?
5. What song heroine's feet were so large that her shoes were number nine?

FIND THE HIDDEN NAMES

the first name of the speaker—Steve—in the first statement below. Now, see if you can discover the names of the succeeding speakers.

1. "Oh, yes, just like you—last every time."
2. "That darn old fool did it again."
3. "When it became cool I ver-soon recovered."
4. "Royal vineyards show buds."
5. "That cigar you are smoking is making me ill."

SHOULDER TO THE WALL

Here's a stunt that will leave your friends hanging in the balance. Object is to place one side of body (foot and head included) against a wall, then try to lift free leg from floor without falling. Just don't send one person to the wall too often or all sense of equilibrium will be lost. If you really want to liven things up, spin the "victim" around a few times before putting him to the test.

Safety Patrols Honored

DUNCAN — For 15 years Duncan Elementary and Alexander Schools have had student safety patrols.

And for 15 years the school zones have been accident-free.

The 90 members of this year's safety patrols at both schools were presented with certificates of merit Friday.

Duncan Mayor Jack Dobson told elementary pupils their job would probably be more difficult next year.

The city works crew has just completed blacktopping Cairnsmore Street which, he said, will no doubt become a "drag strip" for some drivers.

Mr. Dobson thanked the students for their efficiency, courtesy and outstanding contribution to safety in the Cowichan district.

Patrol leaders were: Duncan Elementary—Captain Jennifer Williams and Lieutenants Debbie Gard, Heather McDonald, Gill McQuhae, Roy Vidal, Saunderson and Calvin Payne.

Alexander—Captain Jane Robertson, and Lieutenants Susan Howard, Karen Suttin, Dean Paterson and Don Wilson.

AWARD of a $7,500 Imperial Oil Fellowship has been made to Margaret Anne Doody, 25, of Galiano Island. Miss Doody, who is now teaching in Oxford, England, will receive $2,500 each year for the next three years. A lecturer at Uvic from 1962-64, she is the daughter of the Rev. Hubert Doody, of Galiano Island. Award winners may attend any recognized university.

Bid a Final Farewell

DUNCAN—The last "shay" lovie in the Cowichan Valley quit service this week.

The engine left Duncan CPR yard for her last trip on the island, headed for a new working home in North Vancouver.

Built in 1928 for the Mayo Lumber Co., of Paldi, she was equipped with an extended firebox to burn mill slab wood.

She was converted to oil in 1938 and three years later went to work at the Gordon River logging division of Western Forest Industries Ltd.

Later she was used to switch lumber from the WFI mill at Honeyman Bay to the foot of Cowichan Lake.

Her engine crew in her Paldi days were Gus Schultze and fireman Clarence Martin.

Partially restored, she has been bought by Robert E. Swanson, of Vancouver, and will work switching in the PGE yards near Lions Gate Bridge.

Campbell R. Calls $2 Million Vote

Two school referendums worth a total of $2,206,730 will be put to the ratepayers of Campbell River and Qualicum Beach in the near future.

Announcement of the referendums was made Friday.

Largest of the two is in Campbell River.

Worth $1,808,470, the money bylaw will be split between the provincial government and the school district.

It will include: $154,000 to

INQUEST VERDICT CHANGED

NANAIMO—A coroner's jury here was asked to reconsider its verdict Wednesday night.

The jury was sitting at an inquest into the May 24 death of Nanaimo taxi driver Andrew Jolly, 50.

His cab was in collision with a car driven by Leonard Vallance of East Wellington.

At first the jury ruled death, according to the medical evidence, and recommended that the stop sign at the junction be placed closer to the sidewalk so it could be more easily seen.

DIDN'T STOP

Coroner Russell Inkster then asked the jury to reconsider its decision.

They brought in a new verdict ruling that the collision was caused by Mr. Vallance failing to stop at the stop sign.

During the inquest, Mr. Vallance said he had got lost in the area and didn't see the sign until it was too late.

Strike Unnecessary ... Holiday Granted

COURTENAY — Youngsters staged a "strike" outside school gates in this area Friday.

The strike was in protest of Courtenay School Board's action in failing to declare a half-day holiday.

The holiday was requested Thursday for Friday afternoon by Governor-General Georges Vanier on his trip to Victoria.

Picketing of the gates at Brooklyn School, Comox, lasted until the school bell rang at 9 a.m. The youngsters then filed into school.

During the morning school principals received official confirmation of the holiday and the doors were locked at noon.

Board officials explained they did not receive confirmation of the holiday until Friday morning.

Deputy minister of education J. F. K. English said today: "They're lucky to get any confirmation at all."

"It's not our job to inform them of this sort of thing."

"We didn't declare the holiday. It was declared by Governor-General Vanier."

Viet Cong Shell Nails U.S. Jet

DONG XOAI (Reuters) — Communist Viet Cong guerrillas launched a new attack and shot down a U.S. Air Force F-100 Super Sabre jet today near this bloody battleground where perhaps 1,300 Vietnamese on both sides have been killed this week.

8TH CHANGE IN VIET NAM GOVERNMENT

SAIGON (AP) — Mounting public pressure and an internal feud were climaxed today by the resignation of South Viet Nam's four-month-old civilian government, which returned power to the generals.

It was the eighth change of government in the war-torn country since strongman President Ngo Dinh Diem was overthrown and assassinated less than 20 months ago.

Premier Phan Huy Quat and Chief of State Phan Khanh Sui, who had clashed over a cabinet shakeup, agreed to stay on in caretaker roles along with other members of the government.

But the national charter and the legislative council were eliminated and a highly-placed source said that "at this point we are starting absolutely from scratch."

An estimated 500 Viet Cong guerrillas launched a heavy attack against about 100 men of the South Vietnamese 7th Airborne Battalion less than two miles from the devastated remains of Dong Xoai, a U.S. military spokesman said.

He said the whole battalion was withdrawing to Dong Xoai to link up with a ranger battalion stationed here.

A spokesman in Saigon said the U.S. Air Force jet was shot down north of Dong Xoai and that although the pilot bailed out successfully, the crew of a rescue helicopter found his body riddled with bullets.

Armed helicopters rushed to this area only 60 miles from Saigon. Air strikes on the guerrillas were ordered.

Guerrillas overran a South Viet Nam post and seized a radio station near Song Be, 70 miles northeast of Saigon, Friday night. They promptly began broadcasting from it.

Song Be was the target of a regiment-size attack by the Viet Cong May 11, which was beaten back by massive U.S. and government air strikes.

$164,000 in Gold Bricks Stolen by Plane Bandits

NARCOTICS SHORTAGE SPARKS WILD RIOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A sudden shortage of underworld narcotics apparently sparked a wild, two-hour uproar today along a two-block stretch of skid row here.

No serious injuries were reported.

Crowds estimated at 200-300

gathered outside East Hastings Street cafes and hurled curses and taunts at police officers. Police dogs were brought in to control the mob.

One man was bitten by a police dog but was not seriously harmed.

Police blamed the melee on a sudden, unexplained shortage of drugs on skid row.

Those arrested were being held on charges of fighting, being drunk and obstructing police officers.

4 Hunted In Ont., Quebec

LARDER LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Four masked men Friday stole five gold bars worth $164,000 from a small railway station near this Northern Ontario town in one of Canada's biggest gold thefts.

The men are believed to have made their getaway in a float-squipped aircraft from Larder Lake, about three miles from the Ontario Northland Railway station.

The station, on a small back road a mile from town, was manned at the time by only station agent Thomas Tomkin.

Provincial police at Kirkland Lake, 17 miles west of here, said early today that six roadblocks were still up in the area although it was believed the men had used a plane to get away.

The search for the men spread over Northern Ontario and into Quebec.

The robbery ranks among Canada's largest in recent years. Thieves took $214,000 worth of gold bars from Toronto International Airport in 1952 but the still unsolved theft did not involve armed bandits.

WIRE BRIEFS

Hangar Destroyed

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI) — Damage was estimated at $500,000 in a fire that destroyed an aircraft hangar near the Moncton airport today. One person was injured in the blaze which was believed to have started in the kitchen of the Moncton Flying Club which leased part of the building.

Tories Gain Support

LONDON (AP) — Heavy betting on the Conservative party to win the next British national election was reported today by Ladbrokes, a handbook specializing in this form of wager.

Plotter Arrested

Three Die In Crash

70 MILE HOUSE, B.C. (CP) — Three men died Friday night in the head-on crash of a station wagon and a pickup truck near this Cariboo community. There were no survivors in either vehicle.

Shastri Seeks Trade

Epidemic Kills 550

CAUHATI, India (AP) — More than 550 persons have died in an eight-week epidemic of gastroenteritis in the east India state of Assam, official figures showed today.

OTTAWA IRONY

N-Arms Parade Past Shastri

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada today paraded four nuclear weapons—without their American nuclear warheads—outside the hotel window of visiting Prime Minister Shastri of India.

Prime Minister Pearson took the salute as the parade passed the main entrance to the Parliament Buildings which lie next door to the Chateau Laurier where Mr. Shastri is staying.

As the nuclear carriers—Boeing anti-aircraft missile, Honest John artillery rocket, CF-104 bomber and CF-101 jet interceptor—rolled by or flew overhead, Mr. Shastri was conferring in his hotel suite on economic matters with three Canadian cabinet ministers. They were Finance Minister Gordon, Trade Minister Sharp and Defence Production Minister Drury.

Mr. Shastri Friday night, to spontaneous applause, pledged India anew to abstention from the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

He and Mr. Pearson earlier discussed means of preventing the spread of nuclear arms.

ISSUES DISCLAIMER

Stig Harvor, chairman of the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said in a statement: "If the parade is to show that our government is not ashamed of its nuclear arms and wishes to condition the public to accept them as a conventional part of our armed forces, then we must regretfully conclude that Prime Minister Pearson's statement to renegotiate Canada's nuclear role was just another hollow election campaign promise."

"If the parade is intended to impress the public we can think of better ways to ensure peace and impress the Canadian people than with bullets and bombs."

Informants said, meanwhile, that Mr. Shastri in his speech Friday night at a dinner given by Mr. Pearson eliminated a planned reference to "aggression" by Pakistan against India.

Knife Slash Kills Woman in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — A young woman died from a cut throat and her sister received several knife wounds following a house party early today in the north end of the city.

Police swore out a warrant for Robert Desjarlais, 23, of Calgary on a charge of capital murder. Road blocks were set up at all bridges leading from the city.

Rosalie Johnson, 25, died in a police car on the way to hospital. Her sister, Linda Johnson, 20, underwent surgery for several wounds.

ALL WERE ARMED

The four men in Friday's daring theft all wore masks and carried pistols, shotguns and rifles. They made off with five gold bars weighing a total of about 300 pounds, packed in two safes.

S. C. Yule, manager of Kerr-Addison Mines Ltd. at Virginitown, 11 miles east of this community of 1,200, said the men took bars awaiting shipment to the mint in Ottawa.

He said the gold is shipped to Larder Lake every Friday under guard. When the guard leaves, Mr. Tomkin is left alone with the gold for about four hours until it is placed on a train.

Police said the masked bandits burst in on Mr. Tomkin about 5:30 p.m.

Mr. Tomkin, 35, a father of two, was taken by surprise and tied to a handcar. However, he managed to spot the licence number of the car used by the bandits.

A native of Larder Lake, a man called Luigi, happened by the station just seven minutes after the robbery and freed the agent, who then notified police.

SEE IT, SHOOT IT, SEND IT TO TIMES PHOTO CONTEST

Now is the time for all the good—and not so good—photographers to load their cameras, polish up their lenses and oil their trigger finger for the 1965 Victoria Daily Times Photo Contest.

For six weeks starting June 26, amateur photographers will have a chance to make their hobby pay off by competing in the National Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

This is the third year the Times has sponsored the contest and a record number of entries are expected.

Weekly winners in each category of the contest will receive $10 and will have their winning snaps published in the Times. In addition they'll compete at the end of the contest for grand local winners.

These selected entries will receive $15 each and will then be entered in the national contest to compete for $50,000 in prizes.

A round-the-world photo safari heads the list of 10 expense-paid prize trips to faraway places with exotic sounding names.

The two first prizes will take their winners on a 30-day around-the-world trip for two plus $1,000 in spending money for each winner.

Other prizes include: two 21-day European tours for two plus $500 cash; two 14-day trips to Mexico for two plus $250; two seven-day trips to Hawaii for two plus $100 cash and two seven-day trips to the West Indies for two plus $100 cash.

This year's contest classifications follow three lines: The

'BEATLES? MBE? YOU'RE JOKING!'

British Royalty 'Switched On'

(Times News Services)
LONDON—"St. James' Palace is switched on at last."

That was the reaction of The London Daily Mail to the news that the Beatles had been named Members of the Order of the British Empire (MBE).

Others were not so generous. "MBE? You're joking, of course?" wrote Donald Zec, entertainment columnist of the mass circulation Daily Mirror.

The "startled" Zec conceded the four singers were "a bunch of chaps" and a "showbiz phenomenon" who had parlayed their knack for lively songs into a multi-million-dollar enterprise. "But in the name of all that's sane if not sacred, isn't pinning a royal medal on to four Beatle jackets just too much?" he asked.

REAL GEORGE

Even Beatle George Harrison said: "I didn't think you got this sort of thing for playing rock and roll."

Each of the mop-haired singing quartet, whose hit records have earned a fortune for dollar-hungry Britain, was named a member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (MBE) in the honors list issued on the Queen's official birthday today.

Their names—Harrison, John Lennon, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr—appeared alongside those of diplomats, sculptors, industrialists and publishers.

The Beatles were touched and surprised by the honor. But Britain's editorial writers were largely aghast. The Beatles are the first such group ever to receive such an honor, and among the youngest ever to be members of the order, created by King George V in 1917.

The Sun calls the award "Beatle mania."

The Telegraph says the Beatles had "acquired in modern

Arthur Mayse

At intervals I am approached by one or other saucy young jugglers who dares me to declare my views on sex; and so I will, when the crowd of scribblers around that interesting but over-labored subject thins to the point where a man can elbow his way through.

Today, though, I'd sooner talk about love, a biological phenomenon with overtones.

These become more clear as a man and woman deepen their relationship through shared experience which includes children if they're lucky, and ranges from great happiness to grief.

I think I understand love considerably better now than I did as a young man. In those years, one tends to be almost totally self-centred, also ungentle and arrogant.

Nature, I suppose, arranges matters thus. Certainly, without this concentration upon self, each new generation would have a horribly difficult time achieving elbow-room in a world dominated by its seniors.

In any case, as individuals, Win and I were wilful, proud and very stubborn. Admittedly, we were in love, a condition demonstrated by the fact that we were very much happier together than apart. Still, we approached marriage with the wariness of coons entering a boxtrap.

We made reservations. We insisted that the word "obey" be omitted from the ceremony. Between ourselves, we agreed that our contract should be renewable from year to year. Should one of us not wish to continue, we would part friends, without recriminations.

As I recall that beginning year, we were extremely serious about all this. At its end, we consulted solemnly... decided it was still better to travel together than alone... and entered on a second year.

Then, pausing only to remind our landlord by telephone that he had promised a month past to fix the baulky coal furnace, we went off to shop frivolously for our weekend.

The house which we inhabited was a small grey stucco box with roof corners that stuck up like battlements. It amused our friends, but we liked it, and did what we could to make it more than merely livable.

But our landlord remained hard to pin as an eel, and the furnace kept on giving us trouble.

There was also a window which seemed doomed never to get itself fixed. It had lost a tiny triangle of glass at the base of a crack that ran diagonally across a lower pane. Any number of times we meant to buy new glass, but forgot. The time we did remember, I broke the pane while fetching it home.

As matters turned out, this accident bore significantly on our marriage—with reservations.

One night I checked in at the office after a late assignment. I worked for a few minutes on my story, then phoned home.

Win answered after a long delay. She muttered in a sleepy-sounding voice. But when I asked if something were wrong, there was only silence at the other end.

We hadn't replaced the fourth-hand car sold to buy a ring, so I called for a cab, then began phoning neighbors. They were all out. But the driver kept his gas pedal down, and we made a short trip of it.

I found Win barely-conscious on the front room couch, to which she had stumbled from the phone. Her face was close to the nicked window; its trickle of life-saving air had saved her from a probably fatal dose of carbon monoxide.

Walking her up and down our block in fresh air unlimited, I caught, loud and clear, those overtones to love which let the hearer know he has become part of an indivisible whole called "We."

The landlord, scared, fixed the furnace. We decided to place our contract on a permanent basis. It still is.

DRIVE-IN PROTEST MOUNTS

Mount Douglas ratepayers are organizing a protest against proposed development of a drive-in theatre between Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Rd.

Saanich council is expected to rule on an application for commercial zoning for the 14-acre parcel at its next meeting, June 21.

The application was made some time ago by Famous Players Canadian Corporation. They are seeking to develop a 1,200-car capacity drive-in theatre.

The ratepayers, headed by F. V. Thorne, 4379 Shelbourne, claim development of the movie would decrease property values.

"The only way it wouldn't decrease property values," said Mr. Thorne, "is if all the property owners were granted commercial licences."

'Help to Fight Gorge Pollution'

The newly-formed Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterways Association has started an intensive campaign to protest sewage pollution of the Gorge.

Letters asking for further support of the organization have been delivered to municipal clerks of surrounding municipalities.

"Our organization is new and we need the benefit of your experience in this fight," says a letter to the clerks signed by

Richard M. Faulks, chairman of the association.

A representative of the group is expected to participate in a panel discussion on Gorge pollution next week.

The panel, entitled The Gorge and its Future, will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Craigflower School.

It is sponsored by the Capital Region Branch, Community Planning Association of Canada. Moderator will be Don Mathison, an executive member of the branch.

Other panelists include engineer Russell Potter, Saanich Councilor William Campbell and naturalist Freeman King.

"This is not intended as a battle between Gorge-lovers and Saanich. We want to put the controversy in its proper perspective, branch president Mrs. B. Levitz Packford said today.

Ask The Times

Q. When and how did the practice of eating fish on Fridays originate in the Catholic Church?—R.C.

A. The Roman Catholic Church does not enforce eating of fish on Fridays, but rather the abstinence from flesh meat—a luxury in primitive times, advises Rev. W. H. Hill of St. Andrew's Cathedral. The practice is enjoined on Christians as a communal reparation for the sins of mankind and was felt to be fitting on Fridays as an expression of union with Christ in his death on the cross.

The custom was first mentioned in the document known as the "Didache," or the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, dating from around 100 A.D.

By CANDIDE TEMPLE

She's a stunning 17-year-old Norwegian blonde called Anne, five-foot-two with a peachy and cream complexion.

You can practise artificial respiration on her any Monday at the St. John Ambulance headquarters on Pandora.

Anne—Restusci-Anne is her full name—is a life-sized doll used for demonstrations in the St. John Save-a-Life program.

A lecture and actual demonstration of artificial respiration methods, with Anne as the victim, are included in the program, open to any interested persons or organizations.

The demonstrations will take place every Monday this month at 7:30 p.m., and information is available by calling 388-5565.

The St. John official who described Anne's appearance became quite lyrical about her charms.

Real hair, he said, of a natural golden blonde color. She looks just like a 16- or 17-year-old girl, he assured us. Feet and hands are perfect.

But did he have any idea of her measurements? "Oh, heavens, no!" replied the official.

Bilge Keel Next On Rocking Ship

Endeavour Job to Cost $20,000

By RON SUDLOW,
Marine Reporter

The RCN's $4.5 million oceanographic research ship Endeavour will be fitted with bilge keels to reduce rolling in heavy seas.

Concern about the ship's stability was expressed recently when she was operating in heavy seas and fears were expressed that the ship would founder.

LENGTH OF SHIP

The keel system, which differs from stabilizing fins which run the total length of a ship, will augment its present flume tank anti-roll system.

The keels will extend from the hull about 10 to 12 inches. They will be of steel construction and will be either welded or riveted to the ship.

"This is nothing new in marine design. The icebreaker Camsell used to have them," research ship engineer Ted Fleischer said today.

OIL AS BALLAST

The Endeavour's present anti-roll system uses stabilization tanks on each side of the ship with oil as ballast. Officials say the maximum roll is 25 degrees to either side.

In previous sea trials the ship rolled too fast for the oil to get to the tank on the opposite side. But when it did arrive, it increased the roll, rather than reducing it.

"It is hoped the keels will slow down the roll and give the oil more time to reach the other tank."

"This way it will complement the tanks and make them more effective," Mr. Fleischer said. "Ultimately, we will cut the roll down to 10 degrees or less," Mr. Fleischer said.

Cost of installing the new keels has been estimated at $20,000. She is scheduled for another deep-sea cruise July 5.

FEDERALISTS HERE

World Gov't 'Only Hope For Peace'

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

World Government enthusiasts are not vague, dreamy-eyed visionaries—they are "the only true realists in the world today."

So says Mrs. Virginia McDonald, attractive dark-haired executive secretary of the World Federalists of Canada, which opened a three-day conference here today.

"We are realistic because we know there will always be tensions and conflicts between nations and between groups and individuals within nations," said Mrs. McDonald, interviewed on her arrival from Ottawa.

Realism

"Because of our realism," Mrs. McDonald continued, "we know there must be a world organization to control and rationalize disputes and enmities existing within the organization itself."

"World government is our only hope—for war is clearly a normal process in human history. We are not do-gooders or dreamy-eyed visionaries—we are seeking a rational approach to the threat of world destruction."

Mrs. McDonald revealed that the World Federalists of Canada now has a membership of about 1,900. The U.S. Federalist organization has more than 20,000 members while Japan has hundreds of thousands.

Japan Biggest

"Japan is actually one of our biggest strongholds. Red China, alas, is a question mark at present."

Other delegates expressed similar views in different words. "What is happening in Viet Nam will happen again and again in many parts of the world," said Toronto businessman Arnold Simoni, who was born in Austria and raised in Switzerland.

In his crisp, precise English, he said: "We must have a world organization that will keep these districts wars under control and prevent them from flaring into a global conflagration."

Mr. Simoni said it has been estimated that in the event of a Soviet missile attack, the death toll would be in the range of 149,000,000. "Up to now, the general fear of war has prevented such a catastrophe. But we have no assurance this will continue. As the last world war recedes into history, the fear of war will decrease and children now growing up may have no fear of it at all."

PROF. BURCHILL, 'people with us'

Mrs. McDonald said many young people today seem indifferent to international peace movements.

"The exceptions are earnest groups of youngsters who are interested in improving life in general and are busy studying the causes of war in schools and universities."

Born in Ottawa, Mrs. McDonald studied international law at the University of Birmingham, England, from 1955 to 1958. She joined the World Federalists of Canada six years ago after her marriage to Dr. J. C. McDonald of the federal labor department in Ottawa.

Prof. Burchill said the climate for international peace movements was much less favorable in 1950—the time of the Korean War—than now.

'With Us'

"Today most people are with us in principle even if they are skeptical of our aims."

Prof. and Mrs. Burchill welcomed delegates this morning and said the conference was shaping on promising lines.

Reports of officers were heard at closed sessions this morning and were followed by working committees on policy constitution, finance and membership this afternoon.

Keynote speaker is Baroness (Edith) Summerskill of Ken Wood, England, who is expected to arrive in Victoria late tonight. She will address a public meeting in the McPherson Playhouse Monday at 8 p.m.

ANYBODY CAN HOOTENANNY, JUDGE SAYS

SEATTLE (AP)—Texas Jim Lewis' $1,000,000 suit against the American Broadcasting System and KOMO-TV, Seattle, over use of the word "hootenanny" was dismissed Thursday by Superior Judge Henry Clay Agnew.

The judge described the word as an American colloquialism which he, personally, recalled using when he was a boy of eight.

"That was 60 years ago," he added.

Judge Agnew observed that the word "hootenanny" had been synonymous with "such beautiful words as 'thingamabob,' and 'whatchamacallit'."

BEATLES? YOU'RE JOKING

U.K. Royalty 'Switched On'

(Times News Services)

LONDON—"St. James' Palace is switched on at last."

That was the reaction of The London Daily Mail to the news that the Beatles had been named Members of the Order of the British Empire (MBE).

Others were not so generous. "MBE? You're joking, of course?" wrote Donald Zec, entertainment columnist of the mass circulation Daily Mirror.

The "startled" Zec conceded the four singers were "nice bunch of chaps" and a "showbiz phenomenon" who had parlayed their knack for lively songs into a multi-million-dollar enterprise. "But in the name of all that's sane if not sacred, isn't pinning a royal medal on to four Beatle jackets just too much?" he asked.

Inclusion of the Beatles in the Queen's birthday honors list was called everything from "whim" to "a sign of the times." Even Beatle George Harrison said: "I didn't think you got this sort of thing for playing rock-and-roll."

Each of the mop-haired singing quartet, whose hit records have earned a fortune for dollar-hungry Britain, was named a member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (MBE) in the honors list issued on the Queen's official birthday today.

Their names—Harrison, John Lennon, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr—appeared alongside those of diplomats, sculptors, industrialists and publishers.

The Beatles were touched and surprised by the honor. But Britain's editorial writers were largely aghast. The Beatles are the first such group ever to receive such an honor, and among the youngest ever to be members of the order, created by King George V in 1917.

The Sun calls the award "Beatle mania." The Beatles' manager, Brian Epstein, said the group had "acquired in modern times."

Plane Bandits Escape With Gold Bricks

LARDER LAKE, Ont. (CP)—Four masked men Friday stole five gold bars worth $164,000 from a small railway station near this Northern Ontario town in one of Canada's biggest gold thefts.

The men are believed to have made their getaway in a float-equipped aircraft from Larder Lake, about three miles from the Ontario Northland Railway station.

Provincial police at Kirkland Lake, 17 miles west of here, said early today that six roadblocks were still up in the area although it was believed the men had used a plane to get away.

Th search for the men spread over Northern Ontario and into Quebec.

The robbery ranks among Canada's largest in recent years. Thieves took $214,000 worth of gold bars from Toronto International Airport in 1952 but the still unsolved theft did not involve armed bandits. The four men in Friday's daring theft all wore masks and carried pistols, shotguns and rifles. They made off with five gold bars weighing a total of about 300 pounds, packed in two safes.

S. C. Yule, manager of Kerr-Addison Mines Ltd. at Virginitown, 11 miles east of this community of 1,200, said the men took bars awaiting shipment to the mint in Ottawa.

He said the gold is shipped to Larder Lake every Friday under guard. When the guard leaves, Mr. Tomkin is left alone with the gold for about four hours until it is placed on a train.

Police said the masked bandits burst in on Mr. Tomkin about 5:03 p.m.

Mr. Tomkin, 35, a father of two, was taken by surprise and tied to a handcar. However, he managed to spot the licence number of the car used by the bandits.

A native of Larder Lake, a man called Luigi, happened by the station just seven minutes after the robbery and freed the agent, who then notified police.

Hangar Destroyed

MONCTON, N.B. (UPI)—Damage was estimated at $500,000 in a fire that destroyed an aircraft hangar near the Moncton airport today. One person was injured in the blaze which was believed to have started in the kitchen of the Moncton Flying Club which leased part of the building.

LAUSANNE (AP)—Swiss police announced today the arrest of Samuel Lehmann, self-confessed member of a gang that tried last August to assassinate president de Gaulle of France.

Three Die In Crash

70-MILE HOUSE, B.C. (CP)—Three men died Friday night in the head-on crash of a station wagon and a pickup truck near this Cariboo community. There were no survivors in either vehicle.

Shastri Seeks Trade

Monday Jam Threatens In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Two major bus strikes posed no great problem for weekend stay-at-home commuters today. But a tough Monday rush-hour is expected.

Authorities anticipate an additional 10,000 cars may grope into the city Monday, driven by some of the 50,000 commuters affected by the strike today of the inter-city Provincial Transport Company. But they foresee no crippling tieups for next week.

Both the 900 provincial bus employees and the 3,900 workers of Montreal Transportation Commission, who went on strike last Tuesday, want higher pay and other benefits.

IRONY FOR SHASTRI

N-Arms Parade Past Indian Guest

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada today paraded four nuclear weapons—without their American nuclear warheads—outside the hotel window of visiting Prime Minister Shastri of India.

Prime Minister Pearson took the salute as the parade passed the main entrance to the Parliament Buildings which lie next door to the Chateau Laurier where Mr. Shastri is staying.

As the nuclear carriers—Bomarc anti-aircraft missile, Honest John artillery rocket, CF-104 bomber and CF-101 jet interceptor—rolled by or flew overhead, Mr. Shastri was conferring in his hotel suite on economic matters with three Canadian cabinet ministers. They were Finance Minister Gordon, Trade Minister Duggan and Defence Production Minister Drury.

Mr. Shastri Friday night, to spontaneous applause, pledged India anew to abstention from the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

He and Mr. Pearson earlier discussed means of preventing the spread of nuclear arms.

ISSUES DISCLAIMER

Stig Harvor, chairman of the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said in a statement: "If the parade is to show that our government is not ashamed of its nuclear arms and wishes to condition the public to accept them as a conventional part of our armed forces, then we must regretfully conclude that Prime Minister Pearson's statement to renegotiate Canada's nuclear role was just another hollow election campaign promise."

"If the parade is intended to impress the public we can think of better ways to ensure peace and impress the Canadian people with bullets and bombs."

Informants said, meanwhile, that Mr. Shastri in his speech Friday night at a dinner given by Mr. Pearson eliminated a planned reference to "aggression by Pakistan against India."

The fuse was a $2,600 advertisement placed in the Ottawa Citizen by the Indian high commission here accusing Pakistan of "naked aggression" against India in their border conflict in the Rann of Kutch.

Police Dogs Control Mob

VANCOUVER (CP)—A sudden shortage of underworld narcotics apparently sparked a wild, two-hour uproar today along a two-block stretch of skid road here.

More than 70 persons were arrested and taken to jail cells by a shuttle service of police wagons.

No serious injuries were reported.

Crowds estimated at 200-300 gathered outside East Hastings Street cafes and hurled curses and taunts at police officers. Police dogs were brought in to control the mob.

One man was bitten by a police dog but was not seriously harmed.

Police blamed the melee on a sudden, unexplained shortage of drugs on skid road.

Those arrested were being held on charges of fighting, being drunk and obstructing police officers.

Police said many of those in the mob could have been addicts looking for narcotics.

A drug squad spokesman said the supply of illicit narcotics has dried up in the past two or three days and addicts on the street are unable to obtain heroin and other drugs from the usual suppliers.

Every available patrol car was diverted to the area in an effort to quell the disturbance, which lasted from 1 a.m. to 3 a.m.

Knife Slashes Kill Woman In Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP)—A young woman died from a cut throat and her sister received several knife wounds following a house party early today in the north end of the city.

Police swore out a warrant for Robert Desjarlais, 23, of Calgary on a charge of capital murder. Road blocks were set up at all bridges leading from the city.

Rosalie Johnson, 25, died in a police car on the way to hospital. Her sister, Linda Johnson, 20, underwent surgery for several wounds.

The women, daughters of Evald Johnson of Lougheed, Alta., worked in Edmonton. Their father farms near Lougheed, 100 miles southeast of Edmonton. Their mother died last January.

Police said the slaying happened in a small clapboard house shared by four young women since January.

Neighbors in the quiet, residential area said they were awakened by screams of terror and shouting. A woman kept shouting "Don't do it, don't do it."

SEE IT, SHOOT IT, SEND IT TO TIMES PHOTO CONTEST

Now is the time for all the good—and not so good—photographers to load their cameras, polish up their lenses and oil their trigger finger for the 1965 Victoria Daily Times Photo Contest.

For six weeks starting June 26, amateur photographers will have a chance to make their hobby pay off by competing in the National Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

This is the third year the Times has sponsored the contest and a record number of entries are expected.

Weekly winners in each category of the contest will receive $10 and will have their winning snaps published in the Times. In addition they'll compete at the end of the contest for grand local winners.

These selected entries will receive $15 each and will then be entered in the national contest to compete for $50,000 in prizes.

The two first prizes will take their winners on a 30-day around-the-world trip for two plus $1,000 in spending money for each winner.

Other prizes include: two 21-day European tours for two plus $500 cash; two 14-day trips to Mexico for two plus $250; two seven-day trips to Hawaii for two plus $100 cash and two seven-day trips to the West Indies for two plus $100 cash.
